

CHINA JOINS ROCKEFELLER FORCES TO PUSH FOR RAW MATERIALS HOAX

April 10— Previewing the latest Chinese anti-Soviet and pro-Rockefeller stance, Marquis Child's April 9 column in the Washington Post praised Chiao Kuan-Hua as the "Number 2 man in the foreign office and a powerful and eloquent advocate" who "can be counted on for a vigorous assault on high prices for manufactured goods from the industrialized West and low prices for commodities from the underdeveloped world."

The next day, Chinese Deputy Premier Teng Hsiao-Ping developed this "vigorous assault" in a speech fully embracing the Rockefeller hoaxers at the UN Raw Materials Conference: "If imperialist monopolies can gang up to manipulate the markets at will, to the great detriment of the vital interests of the developing countries, why can't developing countries unite to break the imperialist monopoly and defend their economic rights and interests?...The oil battle has broadened people's vision. What was done in the oil battle should and can be done in the case of other raw materials." Besides paying his compliments to Rockefeller's oil cartels, Teng characterized the world situation as a struggle of the "second world" (Europe and Japan) and the "third world" (the underdeveloped countries) against the "two superpowers," the U.S. and the Soviet Union.

Straight from the CIA

IPS has traced this pseudoradical buncombe as far back as the 1970 ravings of CIA agent M.S. Arnoni, publisher of Minority of One, at an international conference at Lenz, Austria.

In making absolutely no distinction between the U.S. government and the Soviet Union, the Chinese have adopted a degraded viewpoint that places them in the public relations department of the Rockefeller banking interests.

Teng's speech confirms and summarizes the anti-Soviet trend in Chinese policy over the last few years, especially their parroting of the CIA line on the USSR over the past few months.

While there is nothing substantially new in Teng's speech, its timing and its audience are important; and the Chinese themselves have emphasized it. When Teng left for New York, the entire Politburo came to the airport for his farewell gathering.

Teng is a former associate of Liu Shao-Chi and was denounced during the Cultural Revolution, in 1966-67. This fall he reappeared among the party faithful, became Deputy Premier, and was placed on the Politburo in January. Teng's speech is linked to the campaign to criticize Lin Piao and Confucius—a campaign run by Premier Chou En Lai which is taking on an increasingly anti-Soviet character.
