

The impetus for this chorus of "concern" about unemployment is a chaos and confusion operation contrived by the government to disrupt the Ontario harvest. Immigration boards have shut off the flow of migrant labor while promising that conscripted Canadian welfare recipients would work off their checks in the fields--knowing that many will refuse.

Combined with Rockefeller's strangulation of agricultural credit, this squeeze on farm labor is forcing many farmers to sell out to government or Rockefeller-controlled food processors. Farmers' holdings are slated to be combined into giant plantations worked by newly unemployed industrial workers and enslaved welfare recipients. The manpower boards are intended to oversee precisely this vast recycling operation.

AFRICA REPORT

ROCKEFELLER ALLIES PLAN "TOTAL ONSLAUGHT" ON AFRIKANER WORKING CLASS

Oct. 5 (IPS)--A combine of white Afrikaner businessmen and professionals under Rockefeller's control intends to demolish vicious white notions of racial superiority and self-sufficiency, only for the purpose of making the Afrikaner submit to the Rockefeller mass-murder blueprint.

The staged anti-Frelimo counter-coup attempt Sept. 7 in neighboring Mozambique provided an occasion for such dirty work by manipulating the whites' fears of "raging black hordes." As a wave of controlled chaos and panic engulfed the Mozambique city of Lourenco Marques, South African newspapers Vaderland and Transvaler of the ruling Afrikaner party printed ludicrously exaggerated scare headlines that blared "2000 DEATH TOLL" and "2500 MAY BE DEAD"--lies designed to crack the "fearless" Afrikaner exterior to reach the fear within. The South African Broadcasting System "declined to reverse its report of 30 deaths in Beira at a time when no one could find more than five deaths in all Mozambique," according to the Johannesburg Star.

Such deliberate terrorizing of the working class is part of a strategy whose "acceptable" side now is acknowledged boldly by the new Chief of the Army whose rise to the top has been unusually rapid. In the words of Army Chief Magnus Malan, it is "important to develop beyond the purely military, to educate the population...it's got nothing to do with apartheid...We must make a total onslaught on the large uncommitted majority not by weapons but by changing the true disposition of the population. We must ask if we are providing enough opportunities in the Homelands. The things that matter are educational opportunities, communication between Black and White, upgrading the social structure."

Malan must have been deeply satisfied with those psywar headlines and the activity of the very same newspapers in indicating what terrified Afrikaners are now supposed to do. Die Vaderland opened its pages to a group of Afrikaner academics who announced the necessity for "an order in which the urban African, the Coloured and the Indians are included with White South Africa, and the emphasis should fall on full human rights for all." Die Transvaler's editor wrote that "a whole revolution in thinking and living patterns must come in a short time...the picnic is over." Under the guise of "full human rights for all," Africans, Indians, and Coloureds are soon to be given a major share in ruling the country.

Multi-Racial Slave Labor

The secret is that only such a multi-racial government will have sufficient credibility to get away with imposing on all race groups the policies of slave labor (ever-increasing labor intensity) and selective outright starvation which the Rockefeller-Mellon-Morgan ghouls have announced publicly. "Full human rights for all" no doubt be written over the entrance to every mine and field. While the Hitler period cannot yet be referred to openly, Professor D.J.J. Botha of the liberal Wits University has explained that South Africa's "accelerated development" should be accomplished by following the path of postwar West Germany. (There the Allies applied Hitler's methods of food control and labor intensity to accomplish the "German miracle.")

The psywar "total onslaught" described by Army Chief Malan also is being pushed through the Afrikaner universities. The Institute of Urban Studies at Rand Afrikaans University is using "highly personal" questionnaires to construct psychological profiles of the population. When they ask, "In which respect do you disagree with the political party you support?", the question behind the question is: How can attitudes be manipulated to pry the Afrikaner working class loose from its traditional, liberal-hating leadership? Stellenbosch University now is practicing the psywar art of futurology -- "predicting" the very developments Rockefeller seeks to engineer, as a way of softening up the population. Under the sponsorship of Afrikaner capitalist Anton Rupert and with the blessing of the criminally Zero-Growth Club of Rome, Stellenbosch has installed a Unit for Futures Research. Demoralized, directionless Afrikaners are meant to submit to an oracle "more scientific" than the patriarchal volk leaders in their past.

One key operative pops up on every front -- Simon Biesheuvel, protege of fascist psychiatrist John Rawlings Rees. Biesheuvel has spent years in studies designed to help select and manipulate African "boss boys" to extract the last drops of sweat and blood in the mines. Recently exposed by New Solidarity, Biesheuvel now is turning against the Afrikaner unions the arts of manipulation he sharpened to a fine point at the expense of blacks. Afrikaner workers will be jarred rudely from the infantile illusion that their privileged existence was a matter of divine decree. Working hand-in-glove with Biesheuvel is C.P. Grobler, secretary of the Confederation of Labour, who leads the onslaught against the Afrikaner unions from within. Unable to provide any working-class leadership himself, Grobler invites parliament to bring black and white labor together by some unknown alchemy. The predictable result, as in the U.S. "affirmative action" program, will be black and white at each other's throats -- preferential hiring of blacks and firing of whites.

Trojan Horse

The strategy of the Rockefeller cabal in South Africa outlined above is that of the Trojan Horse. Until the end of World War II, the majority of Afrikaners were farmers, while the English South Africans controlled finance and industry. For the sake of greater profit, the English usually were willing to make certain concessions to the African majority, while Afrikaners winced at the thought of sacrificing the principles of race purity for mere lucre. Because of the hostility between English and Afrikaner, it was not possible to "modernize" South Africa through the influence of the English alone. The rise of some Afrikaners to importance in finance and industry after World War II, aided by Afrikaner control of government from 1948, was therefore of special interest to the Rockefeller cabal.

By building relations with the emerging Afrikaner businessmen, the Rockefeller cabal was then able to win over Afrikaners in government, the universities and the trade unions who were willing to destroy Afrikaner values. For example, Jan Marais of the Federale Group of Companies founded the Trust Bank in 1954 and made it into one of the big five, using the most advanced business methods. He was courted and won by the Rockefeller establishment. This proud holder of the 1966 Harvard Business Statesman Award sits on the board of Rocky's Goodyear Tyre and Rubber in South Africa. Anton Rupert, who began as a university lecturer, founded the Rembrandt Group which is today a massive multi-national. David Rockefeller made him a personal friend.

Democracy a "Luxury"

To most Afrikaners, such men are heroes. As one commented on Rupert, "He began with nothing. Here we were, a country that was feeling rather persecuted for our (racial) politics, and finally one of us was making it." Here are precisely the men who can bust the Afrikaner working class while appearing to lead it in the name of "racial justice." While maintaining impeccable Afrikaner political connections and keeping clear of too close association in public with English business, they use the Anglo-American counterinsurgency arsenal of John Rawlings Rees and Frank Kitson. Rupert's leading role was reaffirmed to big business by his recent appearance on the cover of Business Week. His contacts with the more powerful English magnate Harry Oppenheimer are far more significant than he will admit. Ruthless Rupert maintains a low profile. A great believer in boardroom democracy, he thinks dictatorship is desirable beyond the boardroom doors: "Democracy is a luxury only the rich countries can afford."

ETHIOPIA: MILITARY TUSSELES WITH LABOR MOVEMENT

Oct. 5 (IPS)--Ethiopia's Armed Forces Coordinating Committee (AFCC) is experiencing growing pains as it advances from the CIA's script for a progressive military coup to the more complex CIA scenario for consolidating a fascist society. Although the New York Times adopts a motherly tone in editorializing that "they (AFCC) have not yet recovered the sure touch that marked their revolution for the task of coping with the soaring expectations aroused by that revolution," the Rockefeller attempt to ram a "new era" down the Ethiopians' throats in fact run into a temporary snag.

Setbacks in organizing students and worker support have brought about a staccato-like series of governmental crises in which officials are appointed and then removed at an amusingly rapid pace. Rumors to the effect that current leader Aman Andam had been arrested were spreading so quickly throughout Addis Ababa that the AFCC had to initiate threats against "forces of internal dissension," and Andam had to make the rounds of government employees to convince them that he was still alive and kicking.

Organizing "constituencies" to accept fascism, even with the CIA's help, is never easy; and the military originally attempted to bypass the dilemmas they now face by convincing Haile Selassie himself to put on a new, modern fascist face. One Ethiopian Colonel, Abaderash Tessema, braved the fresh air of non-secrecy long enough to spill the beans to the Sunday London Times. Noting that the AFCC had tried to deal with Selassie, Tessema explained, "We reminded him of the Shah of Persia who made a 'revolution from the top' when his throne and his country was endangered by 'revolution from the bottom.'"
