

The widespread circulation of the ELC leaflet has provoked hysteria among other top level SPDers. One by one, they have exploded with admissions of the existence of a Rockefeller conspiracy and of their collaboration with or tolerance of Rockefeller's plans. The Federal Labor Minister Walter Arendt, a trade union bureaucrat set up by the CIA in post-war Germany, stated to IPS that that Heinz-Oskar Vetter and Eugen Loderer had a "democratic" right to work with the Trilateral Commission--and thus the right to set up European-wide fascist regimes.

Before the Darmstadt speech, an ELC picket line in front of SPD headquarters in Dusseldorf got front-page coverage in a local newspaper. A poll taken in a working class district afterwards revealed that 60 to 70 per cent of all SPDers there agreed that Schmidt's SPD "sewer" faction and its Trilateral Commission overseers were incompatible with membership in the SPD.

In Frankfurt, Schmidt stood up to address 5,000 SPDers only to find them all intently reading the now-famous ELC leaflet, which also calls for the removal of Schmidt and his collaborators from the party.

BRITISH PRESS: "CORPORATISM IS FASCISM WITH A HUMAN FACE"

Oct. 21 (IPS)--Patrick Hutter, Financial Editor of the London Sunday Telegraph, this week publicly asked what the Labor Committees have known all along: "Just how near are we to fascism?"

The original question was raised by two professors--R. E. Pahl from the University of Kent and J. T. Winkler from the Industrial Sociology Unit at Imperial College--in this past week's New Society (a Tavistock-style social science journal in Britain). These two argue, and Hutter admits it is plausible, that no matter who wins the election, Britain is headed for a corporatist state, with four goals: "Order, unity, nationalism, and success."

The two sociologists write: "Let us not mince words. Corporatism is fascism with a human face. What all the major parties have done is to make over the core elements of the economic strategy which the Italian fascists, Salazar in Portugal, the Falange in Spain, and the Nazis adopted to deal with the inter-war crisis."

Hutter disputes the two professors over the question of whether British capitalists really want state control to help them over their financial problems, but he admits that with a lack of solid Tory leadership, British industry has little choice. Hutter continues: "One of the many reasons some of us were desperately unhappy about Mr. Heath's long hours of communing with the CBI and TUC [trade unions] was that we saw clearly that, all unwittingly, he was operating upon a corporate model. To us the economy was too complex, and liberty too important, for it to be carved up by agreement between governments, employers and unions. And if it detested Mr. Walker's [General Walter Walker, fascist openly advocating military takeover--Ed.] 'new capitalism' it was because he was consciously or unconsciously attempting to provide the ideological underpinning for such a system. As for Mr. Benn [Anthony Wedgewood Benn, "liberal" parliamentary fascist--Ed.], whom as an individual I like almost as much as I like Mr. Walker, I have described him as the 'Holy Fool' of British politics because his quest for a socialist heaven of participation and planning and universal light would, if successful, lead to a new-fascist hell of corporation and authoritarian darkness."

Hutber concludes that the need for new Tory Party leadership is crucial, and he strongly backs Sir Keith Joseph, the better half of fascist Enoch Powell. Powell, calling himself the "Kingmaker," already has announced his desire to assume the leadership of the Tory Party. Since the Conservatives are having difficulties finding anyone to back Heath, the controversy rages over how long they should wait before finding a replacement.

STARVING INDIANS TO BE WORKED TO DEATH

Oct. 22 (IPS)--The drought-stricken state of Madhya Pradesh, India has created 2.5 million public works jobs for the refugees from India's worst famine areas. While most of India has been written off by Rockefeller, the cabal is setting up scattered agricultural and industrial concentration camps. The famine refugees are being put to work constructing the infrastructure for these projects. Thus, starving Indians will spend their last weeks of misery working on temporary labor-intensive projects to provide loot for Rockefeller banks.

That the famine victims will be used for some work does not mean that Rockefeller intends to provide them with food. India is still subject to the oil companies' organized cutoff of petroleum and fertilizer. Equally criminal is the cat and mouse game that the U.S. government is playing with India over the question of food aid. Over recent weeks, the U.S. has promised miniscule amounts of food aid one day only to renege the next with a flimsy excuse, such as India's atomic bomb explosion.

The U.S. State Department has demanded that New Delhi publicly grovel before it gets even the most limited amount of grain. Now, the Gandhi government is on its knees, but even that is not enough. According to the New York Post on Oct. 21, Andrew J. Mair of the U.S. State Department stated that while India will get some aid, he could not indicate the amount. The reason? Because the subject was "a very sensitive thing with them [the Indians--Ed.]We are reluctant to say that they have asked for aid because they are reluctant to say so."
