

Now, the only possibility for breaking through this demoralization and the certain destruction of living standards that will follow the elections is the organizing around the Unity for Socialism faction spearheaded by the European Labor Committees. Already, a small but significant layer of secondary leadership in the Social Democratic and Communist Parties and the trade unions is seriously studying the Unity for Socialism program.

Looting Workers to Pay Debt

Over the past year, the Danish economy was turned into a looting apparatus to repay the gigantic debt to the multinational banks. Credit was virtually shut off to domestic consumer sectors, housing construction, municipal services, and other consumer-oriented production and shifted to maintain export production, in Banana Republic fashion. Since Denmark is dependent on Mideast imports for more than 90 per cent of its oil and petroleum-related products, such as fertilizer, Rockefeller's Oil Hoax and its 400 per cent rise in the cost of oil forced a seven billion Danish kroner deficit in the balance of payments. Meanwhile, consumer inflation skyrocketed to 18 per cent annually, and unemployment jumped from 2 per cent last November to its present 20 per cent.

The demoralized Social Democratic Party, which lost a significant number of voters last December, sat on the fence through the last election with no programmatic alternative to the collapsing economy. The center faction split from the party, while a populist-anarchist tax lawyer, Mogens Glistrup, captured a large number of voters on a meaningless "no tax" program. In this political vacuum and deathly afraid of the galloping unemployment, the Social Democrats clutched onto local control like a hot water bottle, while the trade-union hack leadership eagerly advocated co-determination because it seemed to give them a following.

ROCKEFELLER AGENT REUSS CHALLENGES REP. PATMAN

WASHINGTON, D.C., Jan. 3 (IPS)--With Congressman Wilbur Mills out of the way, the Rockefeller interests are moving against another old-line committee chairman widely-known as an opponent of major financial interests. It has been announced that Rep. Wright Patman (D.-Tex.) will have his chairmanship of the House Banking and Currency Committee challenged by none other than Henry Reuss (D.-Wisc.), one of the Rockefellers' key Congressional cadre and a member of David Rockefeller's Council on Foreign Relations. If the Rockefellers succeed in this effort to dump Patman, then his Banking Committee--long a muckraking watch-dog over the banks--will become under Reuss a rubber-stamp for the dictates of Chase Manhattan.

In hearings before the Joint Economic Committee in December, Reuss was the major supporter of the Kissinger-Simon $25 billion recycling facility, with the stipulation that the facility should not be established until strict measures against the working class were enacted in the industrial nations.

Accordingly, Reuss has co-sponsored the Full Employment Act, which legislates the relocation of workers to Rockefeller-financed slave-labor projects. This act, which is the organizing focus of every major social fascist in the United States, would set up an integrated slave-labor apparatus, involving corporativist community job boards under tight national control of the U.S. Employment Service.

Reuss' other important quality to the Rockefellers is his "flexibility." While Patman, whose past populist style has been considerably tamed, may not actually prove to be much of an obstacle to the Rockefellers' financial proposals, the extreme delicacy of the Rockefellers' political and financial situation demands a committee chairman more able to shift with the changing requirements of the Rockefellers' conspiratorial plans.
