

ternational offices of the ELP in Wiesbaden and on orders from the Federal Interior Ministry and proceeded to harass and surveil Labor Party members. On June 30, the Interior Ministry released information that this deployment was part of the nationwide seal and search that was concentrating on the Wiesbaden and Frankfurt areas. During both of these operations, Institute for Policy Studies associates Philip Agee, Winslow Peck and K. Barton Osborne of "Counterspy" were in the Federal Republic conducting open conferences to plan for terrorist activation with the complicity of the West German government.

Continent-Wide Alert

Hours before the emergency cabinet meeting which formed the West German "crisis staff," the Interior Ministers of the Common Market countries met in Luxembourg and officially adopted a six-point pact conforming to the "anti-terror" guidelines first established by Interpol, Rockefeller's top private police apparatus, in December, 1975. The Ministers agreed to establish a West European-wide terrorism task force and small group liaisons on a bilateral basis. The resolutions passed by the conference were summed up by the slogan "We'll handle terrorism the way Interpol handles drug-running." Interpol, made less than one hundred arrests internationally in a full year. It is a notorious network of drug-running from the Mideast and Latin America.

On his return from Luxembourg June 30, West German Interior Minister Maihofer announced to the public that the Conference decision to integrate police functions across European borders represented "concrete measures which will be immediately undertaken."

Simultaneously, the Nobel Prize Winners Conference at Lindau, West Germany on Lake Constance attended by government officials, scientists and academics focused on the danger of nuclear terrorist attacks. Nuclear physicist Hannes Alfvén gave the keynote address warning, "So far the nuclear deterrent has worked, but with nuclear terrorism it doesn't work any more.... world war becomes possible after a Kamikaze action...only during a nuclear war will our minds begin to find a means to survive." This so-called nuclear terrorism has been exposed by the ELP, U.S. Labor Party and several reputable scientists as a complete hoax. Such terrorism is only possible if carried out with the complicity of and direct assistance by Rockefeller governmental and private intelligence apparatus.

A third conference designed to disseminate a cover story for the activation of NATO and Interpol run terrorists was held in Rome by J. Boyer Bell, terrorist-controller based at the Columbia University Institute for War and Peace. Bell was meeting with Roberto Vacca, a well-known controller of the Red Brigades and other terrorist gangs in Italy.

Canadian Gov't. Destabilized By Quebecois Linguistics And Olympic Terrorist Operation

Within the Canadian Parliament having just left for a summer-long recess, Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau's government has been thrown into a crisis around the Quebecois "linguistics" issue. Both the pro-Maoist Prime Minister and New York Times have described the current situation as the most "devisive issue since World War II" when Vichite-linked Quebecois (including Trudeau) refused to fight the Nazis.

The Quebecois linguistics issue immediately intersects a press campaign to implement police state measures using potential terrorism at this month's Montreal Olympics as an excuse. Already 30 youths from the militant "Rams" countergang occupied the headquarters of the International Olympics Committee in Lausanne, Switzerland, July 1 in support of Quebecois nationalists. Press accounts have also reported that the Institute for Policy Studies-linked Brown Berets (a group of notorious cop-killers) have entered Canada from the U.S. for the Olympics. Canada troops are already being deployed into Montreal, while the Royal Canadian Mounted Police is conducting public riot drills in the city parks.

The ostensible cause of the current crisis, which threatens to destroy the majority liberal government, was a refusal by the Transport Ministry to permit Quebec air traffic controllers use of bilingual (French and English) instructions to pilots until such a practice was proven safe. Environment Minister Jean Marchand — a leading counterinsurgent involved in the creation of Quebecois trade union control techniques and second generation Quebec nationalist "FLN" terrorism through the journal Cite Libre — has resigned his cabinet post over the decision. Times reports that other French-speaking cabinet ministers may soon follow.

The current activation of this Quebecois-Olympics terrorism scenario coincides with a get-tough policy to cripple Canadian trade unions. Tru-Dung's fascist austerity drive had been stalemated as a result of the militancy shown by striking Vancouver Teamsters who won a 30 per cent wage increase after the U.S. Teamsters in April; however, in June the Wage Price Control Board headed by Trudeau appointee Jean Luc Pepin (also head of the Rockefellers' Tri-lateral Commission branch in Canada) tore-up the agreed upon Teamsters' settlement that threatened to spill over into other industrial sectors.

Trudeau, et.al., have made frequent use of the synthetic Quebecois issue and terrorism to control Canadian labor. A 1970 activation of the FLN terrorist gang permitted implementation of the War Measures Act with military occupation of major cities and mass arrests of labor leaders. North American Labor Party exposed a 1973, aborted attempt by U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger (then also head of the National Security Council) to use Canada as a staging ground for Black September terrorists in collaboration with officials of the Canadian government. This Canadian Black September operation had been intended to sow disorder along the border as part of the NSC-directed "Operation CHAOS." CIA agents involved in the Black September-Canadian subroutine of Operation CHAOS are known to have received major staff promotions and to be still active in creating international terrorism.
