

National Security Agency caught working for British Intelligence

Continuing investigation of an interlinked mail-theft and wire-transfers financial-warfare and "milking" operation against the U.S. Labor Party and other organizations associated with Lyndon H. LaRouche, Jr. has led directly, and repeatedly, to the doorstep of the United States' largest and most super-secret intelligence agency, the National Security Agency — according to a report given by the U.S. Labor Party's security section.

The party reports discovery was made by cross-gridding the results of three separate investigations. The first of the three was an investigation of widespread "black operations" traced conclusively to an escalated NSA telecommunications surveillance launched August 1977. The second investigation was a statistically designed test mailing, which defined crucial features of a pattern of mail-theft being conducted within the Post Office. The third investigation centered on fraudulent practices perpetrated by Canadian banks, including the Bank of Nova Scotia.

Findings of the three investigations dovetailed, proving conclusively that the NSA was deploying its resources on behalf of British intelligence for a massive, illegal operation against the U.S. political party, party officials have reported. Facts developed coincided exactly, according to party officials, with a leaked warning from within the U.S. intelligence community received during 1977, a leak outlining the crucial features of a super-secret, illegal combination of financial warfare (with the acronym "FIST") and "black operations" designed to strip away party members and supporters (bearing the acronym "SWEEP").

Although party officials report that they have not yet discovered the official name for the target of their inquiry, investigations show that the interconnected operations triangulate on an area of coordination situated immediately between the National Security Council and NSA in the chain of command. In addition, officials note, this unnamed super-secret special group is triangulated as closely coordinating with the United Kingdom Liaison Office and associated elements of the British Secret Intelligence Service deployed within the U.S. government. This latter connection is most important, according to officials, since the initiation and command of the overall operation is centered in top-level persons long associated with the old British-Canadian Special Operations Executive (SOE) command.

Investigation number one: telecommunications

Party investigations of NSA telecommunications operations against the domestic telephone and telegraphic communications of the party and numerous of its members has focused on the time interval from approximately mid-August 1977. Although evidence of earlier NSA operations is conclusively established, according to officials, it is the post-August 1977 escalation of NSA telecommunications surveillance which is presently most-accessible to conclusive findings.

The detection of post-August 1977 NSA surveillance — incidentally, quite illegal — has been facilitated by the wide circulation of NSA-generated monitoring of party communications in variously raw, selected and content-altered formats. By inserting "black" content into selected bits of raw telecommunications extracts, agencies coordinating use of NSA materials develop false reports of internal party communications which are selectively "leaked" as purported high-grade intelligence information to targeted credulous recipients. In addition, there are not-infrequent instances of "instant" black operations deployed during the course of telephone communications.

Through use of "intercept" methods which do not depend on conspicuous forms of case-by-case cooperation from telephone and other entities, and with the aid of developed computer monitoring of these intercepts, the NSA has developed the ability to selectively monitor financial records and transactions through tapping computers of the banking system. This NSA capability is indispensable for certain of the varieties of financial-warfare activities conducted through Canadian banks such as the Bank of Nova Scotia, according to experts with whom party officials have reviewed the evidence collected on this operation.

Investigation number two: 'Flaps and Seals'

Cumulative evidence of massive loss of incoming mail prompted party officials to secretly launch a statistically designed experiment to verify this evidence and to determine patterns from which the character of culprits deployed within the U.S. postal service could be conclusively pinpointed. From various parts of the nation individuals including party members, non-members, and other various selected contacts, were each recruited to mail various kinds of correspondence, including letters containing subscription applications, and checks of various denominations.

The test experiment's results did not exclude the possibility that some mail theft was being conducted by low-level employees of the postal service, but it was proven that the pattern of results secured by the test mailings required intensive manipulation of party mail on the kind of special basis possible only through high-level intelligence agencies of the U.S. government. The NSA is the agency which is currently the authorized agency for such operations — called "Flaps and Seals" operations.

Communications sent from various offices of organizations associated with the U.S. Labor Party around the nation usually get through as sent — although sometimes with delays. Communications by persons outside the party do not arrive generally. Some small-denomination checks do get through, but virtually no larger-denomination checks. Officials point out that such a massive, consistent and selective pattern of mail theft requires both persons of high-level authority working within the postal service, and also detailed, current knowledge of party activities and membership lists throughout the country and abroad. The NSA is the lowest-level governmental agency which meets the required specifications of the agency responsible for the mail theft operations.

The assassination plot against

Beginning in July and August 1977, two operational assassination deployments were conducted against U.S. Labor Party Chairman Lyndon H. LaRouche, Jr. Both deployments employed international terrorist networks in an attempt to create a climate for the assassination, and were conducted in tandem with sophisticated financial and communications warfare against organizations associated with LaRouche. The chronology:

July through August 1977

Aug. 1: The U.S. Labor Party receives information from high-level U.S. intelligence sources that LaRouche's name is high on a list of assassination targets in a new wave of "Baader-Meinhof" assassinations. Dresdner Bank chairman Jürgen Ponto, assassinated on July 31, had been on the same list, according to the source.

Aug. 2: Mitchell L. WerBell III, an internationally known security and counterintelligence expert, is officially retained to provide physical security for LaRouche, who at this time is in Wiesbaden, West Germany.

Aug. 7: Information from two independent sources confirms that escalation of a slander and containment operation aimed at isolating LaRouche and the organizations associated with him is planned to begin in September 1977. The coordination of this operation involves links to the Xerox Corporation of Sol Linowitz, and includes both "left" and "right"-wing slanders. The "left" side involves the American Civil Liberties Union, the Fellowship of Reconciliation, the National Council of Churches, and the Institute for Policy Studies. The "right" side of the operation includes Buckley family intelligence networks including Richard Viguerie, which employs the I.D. format slander, "the U.S. Labor Party is KGB," while Ku Klux Klan and American Nazi Party networks are prepared for physical attacks on Labor Party offices and members.

Aug. 8: LaRouche is threatened with eviction from the Wiesbaden apartment where he is residing.

Aug. 11: The West German Maoist paper Arbeiterkampf slanders the European Labor Party as "fascist provocateurs" for exposing terrorist attempts to disrupt the French "Super Phenix" breeder reactor. Articles appear in the U.S. Village Voice and WIN magazine, employing the I.D. format slander that the "USLP are right-wing police agents and fascists" to prepare the environment for an attack on LaRouche and the Labor Party.

Aug. 17: Western Union International, linked to Kuhn-Loeb, serves notice that it plans to cut off Labor Party AVD communications service linking New York and Wiesbaden. Simultaneously, Leasco (Alanthus) begins removing domestic telex machines from Labor Party offices in the United States, disrupting the communications system.

May 1978 to present

Following the May 1978 Schmidt-Brezhnev agreements and the July 1978 Bremen and Bonn summit meetings, a renewed live assassination operation is activated against LaRouche.

Investigation number three: bank fraud

Since late 1974 entities linked to British-Canadian "SOE" circles have been engaged in periodic efforts at massive tampering with bank accounts of organizations either associated with the U.S. Labor Party's leading members or the Labor Party itself. In the first wave of such operations, Chase Manhattan Bank and Citibank were the banks targeted by the operatives. Substantial deposits were wired to accounts in these banks, initially as confirmed bank transfers. Subsequently, "unidentified" agencies intervened to claim these confirmed transactions to their own account. During a recent period, this pattern has erupted again, with the bank-fraud conducted by leading elements of the Canadian national banking system.

It is a statistical impossibility that these several clusters of developments could have occurred as errors of the banks involved. Officials note that if such clusters of errors could occur "spontaneously" within the range of transactions of the accounts involved, the entire U.S. and Canadian banking systems would periodically break down entirely. Any statistical gridding of these transactions is sufficient to prove a very special financial-warfare operation is being conducted against entities associated with leading members of the U.S. Labor Party. It is not astonishing to officials that the Canadian banks involved in the recent pattern of developments are the same top circles of Canadian politics and finance who are implicated in the projected assassination of U.S. Labor Party chairman Lyndon H. LaRouche, Jr., including persons linked to organizations under investigation by Attorney James Garrison and others in connection with the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

USLP chairman LaRouche

June: Coincident with LaRouche's return to the United States, a new wave of slanders is circulated through networks associated with Robert Moss, the Royal Institute for International Affairs, the Heritage Foundation, and Francis Watson, in conjunction with various Zionist intelligence circles in the U.S.

July 16: An assassination attempt occurs against LaRouche in Detroit, where two vehicles attempt to sandwich LaRouche's car in the manner employed in the Schleyer and Aldo Moro operations. The attempt is linked to networks including the National Lawyers Guild, elements in the United Auto Workers, and B'nai B'rith funder Max Fisher. It is coordinated with massive circulation of slander against LaRouche in business circles, to isolate him from potential support.

June 22: Simultaneous with the illegal entry into the U.S. of Baader-Meinhof terrorists, the USLP confirms that Heritage Foundation operative Francis Watson is conducting a nationwide slander campaign against LaRouche.

July 28: An operation orchestrated by Zionist lawyer Nahum Bernstein in coordination with Lord Caccia and Sir Harold Sebag-Montefiore of the British Order of St. John and the Jerusalem Foundation, attempts to set up LaRouche for assassination by demanding his presence in court in a trial involving an earlier assault of a Labor Party leader in New York City.

August: Financial harassment breaks out against the European Labor Party communications system, including arbitrary and illegal demands for prohibitive financial deposits. In late August, confirmation is received that Walter Hesselbach, a board member of the West German Bundespost and linked to the Jerusalem Foundation, is involved in the operation. At the same time, a series of physical attacks is carried out against European Labor Party and U.S. Labor Party organizers by Maoists, the Hare Krishna sect, Croatian Ustashi, and others.

Sept. 5: USLP Congressional candidate Debra Hanania-Freeman is threatened at gun-point outside the USLP office in Baltimore, Maryland.

Sept. 12: USLP members in St. Louis, Mo. and Seattle, Wash., receive telephoned death threats.

Oct. 1: A wave of I.D. format slanders erupts against the USLP and LaRouche subsequent to Mont Pelerin Society meeting on "the LaRouche problem" in Hong Kong.

Oct. 2: Business Week issues slander against the USLP written in coordination with Harvey Kahn of the Institute for Policy Studies, portraying the "LaRouchies" as a religious cult.

Oct. 16: Citizens for the Republic Newsletter, connected with Ronald Reagan, publishes a Heritage Foundation slander, "Bizarre cult seeks conservative allies."

Nov. 1: Joseph Rauh, a member of the B'nai B'rith Anti-Defamation League and co-chairman of Americans for Democratic Action, comments to a U.S. Labor Party member on the Mont Pelerin Society plans to stop LaRouche: "Shoot him."

The triangulation

Party officials report that the August 1977 escalation of NSA operations against the U.S. Labor Party correlates with the initiation of such an operation by Henry A. Kissinger's patron, George Franklin. Franklin, a key insider of the New York Council on Foreign Relations, was a key official to whom Henry A. Kissinger reported for direction following Kissinger's special training by British intelligence at the London Tavistock Institute. Franklin is also a key executive of the Trilateral Commission, a real insider, as contrasted with show-piece appointees such as former Trilateral executive Zbigniew Brzezinski.

According to cross-checked sources, including U.S. government officials, Franklin's role in the affair was as follows.

During the Spring of 1977, one Gordon Novell developed a friendly approach to the U.S. Labor Party for the purpose of developing information he could "sell" to George Franklin, to whom he reported on this account during that period. Novell, tightly tied to the New Orleans Mafia, was in serious troubles at the time, and was desperately active seeking to sell old friends and other political "merchandise" to the CFR crowd, ostensibly in hope that those CFR circles would bail Novell out of his other pressing problems.

At the time that U.S. Labor Party chairman LaRouche was being aided by the intelligence services of three "Western" governments against a Baader-Meinhof assassination threat, top intelligence circles in London and also Henry A. Kissinger intervened in an effort to cut Baader-Meinhof target LaRouche from all assistance. During the same period, Novell, fabricating false information he purported to have secured "under cover" from an associate of security specialist Mitchell WerBell, who had been retained to help guard LaRouche, made a recorded telephone call to George Franklin. In that call, Novell purported to have information that LaRouche had prearranged the execution of Zbigniew Brzezinski, an execution, according to Novell, to be activated on the command of some prearranged signal given by LaRouche.

Subsequent investigations traced Novell's August behavior back to secret meetings with George Franklin in New York City during the preceding spring. Franklin and Brzezinski were fully aware of the fraudulent character of Novell's allegations, but used those fraudulent allegations as a pretext for escalating Brzezinski-directed NSA operations against the U.S. Labor Party.

The "FIST" and "SWEEP" operations were already scheduled for the summer and autumn of 1977, according to confidential, high-level reports from the U.S. intelligence community to Labor Party leaders. "FIST" and "SWEEP" were defined in those confidential reports as a joint operation involving the NSC, NSC-controlled elements of the U.S. Department of Justice, and Rothschild-allied international financial interests. The coordinating agency within the government for this "black operation" against the U.S. Labor Party was identified as a special, super-secret entity linked to the NSC and identical in character and resources with the super-secret entity coordinating operations against the International Brotherhood of Teamsters.

According to officials, every fact developed in connection with the three-part investigation coincides exactly with the outline of the "FIST" and "SWEEP" operation established as an operational project during the Spring of 1977. Undercover and other investigations against British intelligence and related Zionist organizations complete the essential evidence, according to officials' reports.

On the U.S. government side, the chain of command for the illegal operations coordinated through Brzezinski is White House to Brzezinski, to NSA, through a super-secret "plumbers unit" formally reporting directly to Brzezinski's White House office. This "plumbers unit" is coordinated directly with top levels of British intelligence, especially the Montreal-New York "SOE" networks linking "Mr. M" (Montefiore) to the "SOE" inner circles within the New York Council on Foreign Relations. Although Zionist organizations, especially the Jerusalem Foundation (Bronfman) and top circles of B'nai B'rith are complicit in the projected assassination of President John F. Kennedy, Zionist-linked entities, such as Bronfman's Permindex of the early 1960s (e.g., Major (ret.) Louis Bloomfield), are deployed as potential scapegoats in case investigations of assassinations should threaten to come too close to "Mr. M" himself or the British crown.

Although the name of the super-secret Carter White House "plumbers unit" is not yet known, the triangulation conclusively shows this entity to be the coordinating agency behind the mail theft, bank fraud, and other "black operations" being deployed (illegally) against the U.S. Labor Party.

The offenses of which the Nixon Administration was charged are "small potatoes" by comparison with what is presently being deployed from the White House.
