

The Socialist International itself is run by leading figures in Europe such as West Germany's Social Democratic Party Chairman, Willy Brandt; Sweden's leading Social Democrat Olof Palme; France's Socialist Party presidential candidate François Mitterrand; and Great Britain's Labour Party leadership. In the U.S. the forces grouped around the Democratic Socialist Organizing Committee and Social Democrats USA comprise the same outlook and deployments.

The M-19 terrorists in Colombia are one of the clearest cases of this interface. The M-19 states that its model is social-democratic Austria; it has been diplomatically protected by Socialist International leaders like Austria's Bruno Kreisky; and, operating in a Jesuit-controlled environment, it professes a "third way" political ideology.

Funding and strategic perspectives for the Socialist International comes from the U.S.-based German Marshall Fund, a "deindustrialization" think tank led by the leading Eastern Establishment families such as the Harrimans, Bundys, and Meyers/Grahams (owners of the Washington Post).

The Socialist International's leading operatives ranging from IPS's Richard Barnet, to former U.S. Attorney General Ramsey Clark utilize a variety of institutions such as Amnesty International, International Law Association, International Association of Democratic Lawyers, World Council of Churches, and IPS's

European sister organization, Transnational Institute, all of which tie directly into the old Venetian-run intelligence apparatus known as the Society of Jesus. These institutions, in turn, deploy the Jacobin street mobs that create the riots and chaos.

In West Germany, the government of Helmut Schmidt has been the target of a continuous destabilization effort by forces from the left-SPD and its allies in the Lutheran and Catholic churches. One Lutheran/Socialist International asset is the environmentalist "peace" operation called Action/Reconciliation. Right out of Willy Brandt's office in Bonn, a Lutheran-connected group called the Humanistische Union deploys the street mobs throughout West Germany that have been taking over housing in West Berlin, Frankfurt, Bremen, Hanover, and several other cities. These squatter riots, orchestrated by the German Marshall Fund through the radical group Das Netzwerk, are now intersecting demonstrations of the reconstituted greenie/peace movement, as well as Red Army Faction/Baader-Meinhof gang terrorist deployments, where bombs have been going off on a near daily basis.

The most recent effort to upgrade these deployments in the Federal Republic was carried out by IPS's Richard Barnet and former U.S. Admiral Eugene LaRoque of the Center for Defense Information. Barnet and LaRoque planned out detailed mapping of U.S. military targets which were utilized by the "peace movement" as their guide for hitting nuclear stockpile sites (see article, page 40).

In France, the presidential candidacy of François Mitterrand is utilizing the unrest among the immigrant North African population to push for riots and police confrontations. A recent activation of the terrorist/environmentalist group, Direct Action, has targeted the nuclear energy policy of President Giscard. Last month, the offices of the French national energy company, Electricité de France, were bombed. The recent assassination attempt by the Corsican separatist organizations which involves major intelligence services from nations hostile to Giscard's Mideast policy is being investigated by French security services. Libya is a prime target.

In the U.S. over the past week scores of smaller demonstrations than those in Europe were held in several cities. The IPS-controlled El Salvador People's Organizing Support Committee has been active throughout the United States. Three thousand demonstrators protested U.S. military involvement in El Salvador on the weekend of April 20. Planning for the next "mass march" is underway with the target of May 3 being organized for a projected 50-100,000 demonstrators in Washington, D.C. Chicano groups like La Raza Unida on both sides of the U.S.-Mexican border have been active in planning border incidents against police and law enforcement agencies designed to create a backlash among the Mexican-American population.

The attempt to kill Prime Minister Gandhi

The Indian government official reported to the parliament April 27 that they had discovered an attempt to assassinate Prime Minister Indira Gandhi by means of sabotaging her plane. A security inspection of the jet Mrs. Gandhi was scheduled to use on a May 5-13 tour of the Middle East revealed that some of the cables had been deliberately cut "in such a way as to ordinarily preclude detection," according to government spokesman Zail Singh.

A crack team of technicians determined that "it was a clear case of sabotage." The cables had been cut in such a way as to ensure the crash of the plane around the fourth takeoff following the cutting.

While the government itself did not immediately suggest who might be behind the plot, a member of parliament from Mrs. Gandhi's Congress-I Party pointed out, "Since Mrs. Gandhi's return to power, certain forces have been trying to destabilize her government. Failing that, they are now attempting to liquidate her physically."
