The Genoud networks and the plan to set the Mideast on fire

by Scott Thompson

The death knell for Arab nationalism, overwhelmed by a revival of Islamic fundamentalism that has already plunged Iran into the Dark Ages under the Muslim Brotherhood's psychotic Ayatollah Khomeini and his mullahs, will be sounded at a conference sponsored by Georgetown University's Center for Contemporary Arab Studies on April 14-15. "In less than a decade," the conference document states, "Islam has become so dominant a force in the eyes of the West that other ideologies and forces of solidarity in the Islamic World—e.g., nationalism—are thought to have receded into the background." Speakers at the conference will include many of the leading academic apologists and strategists who heralded the British Arab Bureau's Iranian coup plot that toppled the Shah "as the harbinger of a new chapter in the history of Islam."

From pre-conference statements made available to EIR, the purpose of the Georgetown conference will be to create a new combination of Islamic fundamentalist ideologies that may be used next to engulf Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Algeria, and Morocco with feudalist revolutions similar to the one in Iran. While the Georgetown discussants work to weave the myths that underly Wahabism, Shi'ism, the Muslim Brothers, and Sufi Masonry into a common strand, the forces on the ground that will carry out the actual coups and assassinations in these countries share a common point of control through the Lausanne, Switzerland-based Nazi international.

One of the more relevant cases is that of former Algerian President Ahmed Ben Bella, a notorious early follower of Hitler, who has been reborn as an Islamic Fundamentalist and is now engaged in a coup attempt in Algeria that immediately threatens the King of Morocco. Among Ben Bella's most prominent backers since the 1962 Algerian Revolution that first placed him in power is François Genoud, a member of the Swiss Nazi Party during World War II, who assisted Allen Dulles from 1943-45 in negotiations to redeploy Nazi intelligence assets into safe havens for later use. Among those assets which Dulles shared with British and Swiss intelligence allies was Amt VI, the "foreign nationalities division" of SS General Walter Schellenberg's Sicherheitsdienst (SD), consolidating both the Second Division of Admiral Canaris's Abwehr and foreign nationalities division of the Waffen SS that maintained extensive Mideast networks through an alliance with the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem. The Swiss-based François Genoud is, as well documented below, today the banker and one of the principal controllers of these Amt VI assets.

Distant as the Georgetown conference may pretend to be from François Genoud and the reborn Ahmed Ben Bella, it is through such members of the Nazi international that the dirty work outlined by its participants will be achieved.

The Georgetown conference has all the appearances of being a replay of one held on Oct. 21-25, 1981 at the Rothko Chapel in Houston titled "Islam: Spiritual Message and Quest for Justice" which brought together leading strategists and assets of the British Arab Bureau only days after the Muslim Brotherhood assassinated Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. As with the Rothko Chapel event, the Georgetown conference is being run in parallel with a meeting in Paris of Islam and the West, which is tied to the Club of Rome through such figures as NATO strategist Alexander King and the Kim Philby-linked KGB agent Djerman Givishiani.

On April 29-30, following the Georgetown conference there will be another secret meeting of Islam and the West at the Meridien Hotel in Paris, attended this time by former British Prime Minister Ted Heath; French neo-Gaullist Michel Jobert; German banker Karl Otto Poehl; Olivier Giscard d'Estaing, the brother of the former French President; Musah Ali, vice president of the Dimi Bank and consultant to Pakistan's military ruler Zia ul-Haq; Maurice Strong, chairman of Royal Bank of Canada; Andreas Wall, chairman of Volvo; and Ahmed al Najja, secretary general of the International Association of Islamic Banks.

Where the Islam and the West meeting brings together leading representatives of oligarchic interests that have sought to play the Muslim Brotherhood card, the Georgetown conference is more a gathering of strategists with such figures as: Mahmoud Ayoub, a Lebanese-born professor at the University of Toronto who is a promoter of Sufism; Cherif Bassiouni, a relative by marriage to the European black nobility, who is both a professor at the University of Chicago and head of the Sicilian Institute on Terrorism; Richard Mitchell, the leading world expert on the Muslim Brotherhood with close ties to its Egyptian underground and those involved in recent efforts to destabilize the Indian government, and who is now a professor at the University of Ann Arbor; and Mansour Farhang of Princeton University, who was briefly Iranian Ambassador to the U.N. under Khomeini's Foreign Secretary, Sadegh Ghotbzadeh. The Georgetown Center is sponsored by many of those corporations and individuals who actively promoted the overthrow of the Shah of Iran.

In the case of Rothko Chapel, the connection between such strategists and the Nazi international-linked networks that carry out the dirty work they envision was even more direct. This conference, which was prominently attended by François Genoud's Ben Bella, was sponsored by Mme. Jean de Menil (née Countess Schlumberger), whose husband emigrated from France to Houston in 1945 to establish a branch of Schlumberger, Ltd., one of the largest oil survey companies in the world. The Schlumberger family is intermarried closely with the Neufelize, Mallet, and other Swiss oligarchic banking families who actively promoted Hitler's rise to power and assisted their relative, Allen Dulles, in orchestrating the post-World War II reorganization of the Nazi international now controlled by such figures as Genoud.

Jean de Menil was also a board member of the Permindex Corporation that wove together British, Swiss, Israeli, and Nazi international figures into an international "Murder, Inc." Among these were such figures as British Special Operations Executive veteran, Maj. Louis M. Bloomfield, King Farouk, a close ally of the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem's fascist "Green Shirts;" and, Prince Gutierrez Spadafora, the former Mussolini Undersecretary of Agriculture, who became an adviser for the post-war activities of François Genoud and SS Col. Otto "Scarface" Skorzeny in Egypt and other sectors of the Mideast.

In 1969 New Orleans D.A. Jim Garrison indicted members of Permindex for their role in the November 1963 assassination of President Kennedy, while French intelligence named Permindex responsible for dozens of assassination attempts in the early 1960s against French President Charles de Gaulle carried out by OAS personnel linked to Genoud.

The process that participants at the Georgetown conference are part of represents an oligarchic campaign to disintegrate civilization under conditions of deep economic depression that threatens to plunge the world into a New Dark Age unprecedented since the 14th century.

In a recent interview made available to EIR, Mahmoud Ayoub, an acquaintance of Ben Bella, describes how such a collapse of civilization might occur in Saudi Arabia:

"The problem with the Saudi royal family is that they are saddled with an ideology that they cannot live up to, but they feel that it is the only wall behind which the regime can exist. So, I say that the Saudi regime lives not with the enthusiastic voice of its founder, Abdul Wahabi, but rather with its oil wells as did the regime of the Shah of Iran. . . . The same power that brought the Saudis on the scene will eventually destroy them. . . . What happened at the Al Haram Mosque two years ago was not really the work of a starry-eyed group; it was a genuine revolution that failed. But, I don't think that every revolution will fail."

What Ayoub refers to as the Haram Revolution was an effort to split the fanatic Wahabites from the Saudi Royal family by showing that they could not protect the most sacred of Islamic shrines, the Al Haram Mosque in Mecca. Leading this revolution was the Muslim Brotherhood-trained leader Juhaiman who drew together religious fundamentalist brotherhoods in Pakistan, the Muslim Brotherhoods of Egypt, the Sudan, Kuwait, the Teghlibi brotherhood of India, and even Black Muslims from the United States into a Kuwaiti-based movement, Jamiat al Islah (Call of the Brethren).

Mansour Farhang, the Ghotbzadeh-linked Iranian Ambassador to the United Nations, is today at the Princeton Center for International Studies where Bernard Lewis first authored the plan adopted by the Carter administration in tandem with the British Foreign Office to revive Islamic fundamentalism and tribalism to redraw the map of the Middle East. In an interview made available to EIR, Farhang stated he was also a party to meetings between Bani Sadr, Ghotbzadeh, and Ben Bella in which the latter's rebirth as an Islamic fundamentalist was first discussed. Farhang sees Egypt as the next target for an Iranian-style revolution:

"From my personal value perspective as a participant in the Iranian Revolution, it was a tremendous force that will have dramatic consequences upon the region. . . . If there is anywhere that Iran may serve as a model it is in Egypt, where the Muslim Brotherhood remains strong and where many of the same conditions of mass poverty among a large urban population exist. The same process that occurred in Iran is now underway there, but it cannot be spoken of because it is an underground movement."

Cherif Bassiouni stated in an interview made available to EIR that the main catalyst for Islamic fundamentalist revolutions may well be the attempt by an Israeli faction that includes Yigal Yadin and Yuval Ne'eman to rebuild the Temple on the Mount in Jerusalem that is now the site of the second most holy Islamic shrine, the Dome of the Rock: "If the Dome of the Rock is damaged, the next day you are going to see the Islamic world in flames. I wouldn't want to be in an American embassy on that day, I'll tell you that much. And, any regime that would continue to have any relations with Israel or not use its entire capabilities to put pressure upon the United States to again put pressure upon Israel would certainly be in a very difficult circumstance."
