

The IIASA: systems analysis and genocide

While the Soviets and Bulgarians were bringing their neo-Malthusian environmentalist assets to Varna, for the Aug. 25-28 "Ecology and Peace" conference, another Warsaw Pact neo-Malthusian dirty-tricks operation was quite active on another front.

The International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis (IIASA), from Aug. 25-29, held a meeting of 60 "systems analysts" from around the world, at IIASA's headquarters in Laxenbourg, Austria, to discuss "Equilibrium Modeling." Representatives from the Soviet Union, Hungary, Bulgaria, Poland, Czechoslovakia, and Yugoslavia were in attendance, as well as academics and systems-analysts from about 15 other countries. The overall coordinator was Harvard University's Dale Jorgensen.

This meeting was a follow-up to a "world modeling" conference held under the title, "World Development Scenarios," which had met under IIASA auspices from June 24-25, in Sofia, Bulgaria. Overall director of this event was Bonn University's Prof. Krelle, an IIASA official.

The euphemistic titles under which these conferences are held, cannot hide the key role IIASA plays, in mapping out the economic ("econometric") justification for genocide and depopulation. IIASA was founded in the late 1960s, through joint efforts of the Soviet Union's Global Systems Analysis bigshot, Dzhermen Gvishiani, a top KGB official; White House Special Assistant on National Security McGeorge Bundy, reputed head of the East Coast Liberal Establishment; and Britain's Lord Solly Zuckerman, scientific adviser to the late Lord Mountbatten of the British Royal Family.

The food weapon

IIASA concentrates, primarily, on the subjects of food, agriculture, and energy, all key chokepoints in the maintenance and expansion of the world economy. EIR has learned that, on Aug. 1, 1986, IIASA's Food and Agriculture Project signed a contract with the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, to prepare a three-month study on "Population Carrying-Capacity." This report is to supplement an earlier one, prepared in 1984 by

IIASA, the FAO, and the United Nations Fund for Population Activities, entitled, "Potential population-supporting capacities of lands in the developing world."

"Carrying-capacity" has become the environmentalist catchword for justifying elimination of millions of people who cannot be "carried" by the land.

Such reports might go a long way in explaining, why the FAO is so committed to covering up the extent of famine and ecological devastation in Africa: It has an arrangement with the Soviet nest at IIASA, to cause further famine and ecological devastation in Africa. IIASA's Food and Agriculture Project, and the FAO, have collaborated intimately, since the FAP was created in 1976, IIASA sources report.

Also, IIASA has seconded a former director of the FAP, one Mahendra Shah, to the "monitoring and evaluations" bureau of the United Nations Emergency Relief Operations for Africa office in New York. This office is headed by a leader and funder of the arch-Malthusian Club of Rome, Canada's energy magnate, Maurice Strong.

'Politics of hunger'

IIASA also has set up joint studies with the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Together, USDA and IIASA are setting up an agriculture studies group at Iowa State University. This too, might reveal an interesting story. One notorious Iowa State graduate, William Paddock, is one of the most outspoken advocates of drastic reduction of the populations of the developing world. Another, John Garang, is the head of the rebels in southern Sudan, whose forces are distributing a document, entitled, "Politics of Hunger," boasting about how food is used as a weapon in the "guerrilla war" in the South. The Catholic Bishop of Sudan, on leaving Sudan recently, castigated Garang and friends as genocidalists, who receive the entirety of their logistical backing from the Soviet Union. The Bishop cited Garang, when asked what he thought of the mass-starvation of children: "If some die, more will be born."

Finally, it is noteworthy that IIASA "systems-analysts" printouts are used, systematically and cynically, to disorient duped or credulous American businessmen. In the spring of 1985, IIASA sponsored a conference at Duke University in North Carolina, U.S.A., around the theme, that only East-West trade could bail out the American economy, because the Ibero-American debt crisis and the collapse of whole countries in Africa and other parts of the developing world, made these inappropriate places for investment!

Nothing so starkly demonstrates the cynical and genocidal policy intent of the Russian masters of IIASA.
