

without precedent. These 16 individuals were all charged with "failing to register as securities broker/dealers" and "selling unregistered securities."

Lawyers in Virginia cannot remember the application of the state securities laws in criminal prosecutions before. They are exclusively used for civil regulation. So, after the massively publicized arrests and indictments, Terry had to ask the State Corporation Commission to issue a ruling that the political loans to the LaRouche movement were in fact securities. Elizabeth Lacy, one of three SCC commissioners, accommodated Terry by issuing an ex post facto ruling which allowed the prosecutions to proceed. Since then, her career has been meteoric. In 1991, she received the Merit Award of the National Conference of Christians and Jews in Virginia,

Terry comes unglued over lesbian charges

Just before the Oct. 6 televised debate of Virginia gubernatorial candidates, which excluded independent Nancy Spannaus, Dr. William Gray, a psychiatrist whom the state is prosecuting for sex with minors, stunned a hearing of the state Board of Medicine by charging that Democratic candidate Mary Sue Terry had a lesbian affair with a patient of his throughout the 1980s, and that his patient committed suicide over the affair in 1990.

Gray denies the charges against him, which were dropped as part of a plea agreement in which he agreed to surrender his medical license. Gray, who claims he is being railroaded by the state, charges that after the suicide of the young woman, whom he refuses to name, "all hell broke loose. . . . There was a concerted effort to generate witnesses against me."

In the televised debate, mention of the charges by Dr. Gray was scrupulously suppressed by the panelists. But the media throughout Virginia on Oct. 7 reported the charge, and Terry's response, which was to lash out against Lyndon LaRouche and Nancy Spannaus. "It's obviously ridiculous and untrue," said Terry. "As Attorney General, my office prosecuted this doctor for having sex with young boys. . . . He has now struck against me in the vilest way. The same thing happened to me when I prosecuted Lyndon LaRouche's associates. His followers have also engaged in a smear campaign against me for years." Terry told the media she has never had a homosexual relationship.

an organization which is a virtual clone of the ADL, and then she was appointed to the Virginia Supreme Court.

In addition, the Virginia Supreme Court placed all of the "LaRouche" trials, except that of the now-jailed Rochelle Ascher, in the courtroom of an ADL-linked judge, Clifford Weckstein of Roanoke.

Weckstein, who came under sharp criticism for the barbaric 77-year sentence of the now-jailed Michael Billington, flagrantly violated a principle fundamental to the rule of law—that a judge must at least appear to be fair and impartial. Judge Weckstein initiated a 14-letter correspondence with the ADL, through the law firm of its national committeeman in Virginia, Murray Janus. Weckstein's letter, notifying Janus of the difficulty of his position, produced a mobilization of ADL networks throughout the state, and the publication in news media of numerous ADL slanders of the LaRouche movement. Weckstein never rebuked the ADL, even when ADL regional director Ira Gissen sent him an ADL resolution calling for a Jewish judge to fill the next vacancy on the Virginia Supreme Court, and implying that Weckstein would be backed for such a promotion if he continued aiding the prosecution.

For the five defendants tried before him to date, Weckstein has imposed an average sentence of 41 years.

What does Mary Sue Terry owe the ADL for their invaluable assistance in the LaRouche cases? What does the ADL have over Mary Sue? Is the ADL influence over Terry responsible for the singular lack of success of her office against the drug trade? Will the nationwide criminal investigation of the ADL soon come to Richmond?

Virginians have a right to know.

Who rents Mary Sue?

In addition to campaign contributions from Wall Street firms and law firms that everyone knows about, Mary Sue Terry is also being funded by the moneybags behind the ADL, who are also behind the anti-union coal companies.

Mary Sue's gubernatorial campaign received $10,000 from Edgar Bronfman, and $5,000 from Seagrams in early July. Bronfman is honorary vice-chairman, as well as a financial backer, of the ADL. Seagrams, the whisky and soft drink company, is the Bronfman family's premier business.

The Bronfmans hold a major interest in Consolidated Coal, the corporate giant which has recently forced a new miners strike by renegeing on hiring agreements with the United Mineworkers Union. The Bronfmans own 25 percent of the DuPont Corporation, which in turn owns 50 percent of Consolidated Coal.

Democrat Terry has earned these contributions: She is well known as an enemy of the labor movement and the mineworkers.

When presented with evidence of massive brutality by state police against mineworkers during the 1989 Pittston strike, she shrugged her shoulders. She did nothing to prevent
