The NAWAPA Mission

Anyone willing to face the truth, knows that the United States has entered the process of terminal decline. The financial system is dead; the physical economy and labor force are disintegrating, far beyond their state of collapse in the 1930s; all talk of “recovery,” jobless or otherwise, is a sick joke. The only thing maintaining the appearance of an economy, is the printing press at the National Mint, which is working overtime, and approaching Weimar hyperinflation rates.

Worse yet, the American population vacillates between white-hot rage, and demoralized despair. While people correctly focus much of this emotion at their fascist President, and cowardly, corrupt Congress, their actions are largely impotent.

Under such conditions, there is only one solution. The U.S. population must once again be mobilized around a national mission, a future for themselves, their nation, and their posterity. With a workable vision before them, Americans can once more bring to bear that “can-do” spirit of optimism, which is required to accomplish what appear to be miracles, but are actually just the requisite for bringing about a new Renaissance.

It is from this standpoint, that Lyndon LaRouche, the American patriot who should be President, has issued his clarion call for the immediate launch of the North American Water and Power Alliance (NAWAPA), within the immediate few weeks ahead. There is no higher priority, LaRouche has emphasized. We have to present the American people with the alternative to the disaster they are currently experiencing, or we are not going to get them to move. Let Americans see how we can immediately employ several million skilled workers, and many million more less-skilled, in transforming the entire environment of the Western U.S., Canada, and Mexico for the benefit of life, and they will be inspired to join the fight to defeat the forces that have created the current disaster—namely, the British financial empire and its puppets, starting with President Barack Obama.

“By having a winning alternative to Hell, is the only way you’re going to save this nation, and the world,” LaRouche explained Aug. 21. “What will happen in Russia, will depend upon their reaction to this. What will happen in Germany, will be the reaction to this. . . . If we win over enough people in Germany, and if we convince the Russians that we’re serious, and they act accordingly; if we get the Four-Power agreement functioning—all within weeks, all within weeks—we can win this war.”

NAWAPA puts the Bering Strait tunnel at the top of the agenda, and means an activation of Russian-American cooperation, to bring development to Siberia. This will immediately spill over into Mongolia, China, and India. Via NAWAPA, we have a framework for building Africa as well.

In other words, adopting NAWAPA will give us a chance to win the war against the British imperial system.

To win that war, we will have to accomplish certain other crucial tasks. The first is to remove President Obama from the Presidency. The second is to immediately re-adopt the strict Franklin D. Roosevelt Glass-Steagall principle, which will clean out the rot in the banking system which is preventing it from functioning as a source of credit for the physical economy.

So, NAWAPA is the mission. It is the alternative to a descent into Hell. It is the alternative conception of man and his relationship to the universe. NAWAPA thus provides a moral imperative for getting Obama out of office, because, without doing so, NAWAPA, and what it portends for humanity, would not be possible.
