

Susan Rice Is Lying

Sept. 19—President Obama's Ambassador to the UN Susan Rice went on ABC-TV's "This Week" Sept. 16, and lied her head off in an attempt to protect her boss from charges of complicity in the attack on the Benghazi Consulate that resulted in the death of four Americans. She claimed that the attack was "spontaneous," and that there was a significant security presence at that location.

Over the last two days, significant voices have come forward to counter and expose those lies.

First, Libya's Interim President Mohamed Yusef al-Magariaf has told numerous news media, including Al Jazeera Sept. 15, that he was certain that the deadly attack on the U.S. consulate in Benghazi on Sept. 11, was "premeditated" and organized by "experienced masterminds" from al-Qaeda.

Second, on Sept. 17, the London Daily Telegraph, quoted a Libyan security guard, who declared that the attack on the consulate occurred before there was any demonstration over the anti-Islamic film, made in the U.S.A., which, it was claimed, provoked the attack.

The guard, who is recovering from wounds received in the attack, and whose name has not been released, said that the assault began with a single warning shot, followed by hand grenades and heavy shooting from automatic rifles and rocket-propelled grenades. "They were shouting 'Kill the bastards,'" he said, not religious slogans.

He said there were no demonstrators at the time of the attack, and that it came in from three sides. He said the attackers' accents were Benghazi, they wore masks, and many had their trouser legs rolled up—a mark of the Salafist sect.

Third, an MSNBC news short, which appeared on Breitbart.com Sept. 18, featured a reporter who said that multiple officials have reported that there was no significant security detail, and that the two Navy SEALs who were killed were not part of a security team, as Rice had claimed. At the time of the attack, just one U.S. officer and a local militia were guarding the consulate.
