

If you liked Quantitative Easing, you're gonna love Quantitative Stealing. This one's to die for.

The British Empire's Cyprus Template of "bailing-in" the banks, if extended to the entire European Union—as is the currently operational plan—would generate about $3.4 trillion in seized funds. The amount they intend to steal from U.S. and U.K. depositors is that much again. The combined total of $6.8 trillion in Quantitative Stealing (QS) is a tidy sum, relative to the $4.4 trillion in hyperinflationary Quantitative Easing (QE) that was generated to try to bail out the bankrupt trans-Atlantic financial system between 2008 and the end of 2012.

To see where this is heading, add to that QE to date, the additional $2.3 trillion annual QE now underway in the trans-Atlantic region (U.S., U.K., and EU), and the $2 trillion in QE that Japan has announced from here to the end of 2014. That comes to a total QE of nearly $11 trillion by 2014.

And even as bank lending has fallen as QE rose from 2008 to 2012, stealing deposits will amount to additional "negative lending." So, by the end of 2014, the cumulative QE+QS (bail-in and bail-out

Quantitative Stealing: Coming Soon to a Bank Near You (trillions of dollars, cumulative change)

looting) is heading toward a cool $18 trillion, while the cumulative fall in bank lending will be nearly $8 trillion.

But don't focus on the arithmetic—it doesn't really mean all that much. Consider the intention behind the policy that the numbers reflect. If this British imperial policy of hyperinflationary destruction of the physical economy, whose intention is to drastically depopulate the planet, isn't stopped immediately with Glass-Steagall, you're probably going to be dead well before 2014 rolls around.

—Dennis Small