
Editorial

Get Obama Out of the Way

Lyndon LaRouche on Sept. 2 delivered a stark warning that the United States economy is collapsing, with a financial system bankrupt beyond repair. However, he added, there are clear corrective measures that can be taken, “if we can get control of the process and stall the collapse.” But this remedy is political—remove President Obama from office without further delay, along with his protector John Boehner. Under Obama’s tenure as President, the U.S. economy has been virtually wiped out. Today, the southwest region of the country is dead, facing a collapse of the entire water system. This will soon translate into mass starvation, unless emergency actions are taken—actions that Obama and Boehner have systematically blocked.

The depth of crisis is highlighted by the fact that the U.S. banking system is about to blow up altogether, on a scale far beyond that of the 2007-09 breakdown; and the American people’s impoverishment has grown worse every year since 2007. It is not certain what day of the week the blowout will happen, or whether it will begin with the collapse of a major European or Wall Street bank. What is certain, however, is that the collapse is coming very soon.

LaRouche emphasized that recognizing this harsh reality is the first step toward managing the crisis so that it does not lead to total disintegration and death. This means that Boehner must go from the Speaker’s chair; Obama must go from the White House. This is the number one matter for Congress to take up when they return on Sept. 8. Nothing short of Obama’s removal can create the conditions by which the United States can avert total extermination of the economy.

LaRouche’s message to the American people, delivered to colleagues on Sept. 2, was: “Obama is starving you to death, so you must remove him now. Then we can reorganize the finances of the nation to prevent a chaotic collapse.” Actions can be taken right away to boost production in the United States, by launching vital infrastructure projects and other measures, so that the reality of the bankruptcy of the nation can be managed and a total collapse stalled while new policies are put in place to restore physical-economic real growth.

The key to the positive actions that must be taken, is for the United States to ally with the nations of the BRICS, led by China. China, Russia, India, Argentina, and Egypt—among others—are moving aggressively to assert an entirely new system, based upon the values of productive labor power, and scientific creativity per se. They are not about to be intimidated by the hapless Obama, whose every babbling is more stupid than the last.

Indeed, the world is laughing at the United States, while U.S. citizens sit stupefied and depressed, before a President who is steering the country inexorably toward destruction.

Yet, Americans could change this situation in the wink of an eye. Look at how Egypt turned around 180 degrees, after the removal of Mohamed Morsi, within a matter of months. China’s stunning progress, since the period of the Cultural Revolution, has taken longer, as has Russia’s, but the change is equally dramatic. The citizens of these nations have taken their countries back, and are forging a future for all mankind.

It’s high time Americans joined them. And the first step is to get Obama out of office, and out of the way.