

Schmidt: I also had bees two years ago, but I stopped because of Save the Bees. The beekeepers—old men over 55, like me—were told “If you want to keep bees, you now have to get certified. You have to attend seminars and have proof that you can keep bees.” What have people been doing for 50 years? We’re supposed to have some idiot from some government office explain to us how it works!? The end of the story was that we said we were going home and burning our hives. Many people quit the job. I quit too, and that saved the bees.

Q: You confronted the CDU deputy on stage yesterday: “If you don’t support us now—”

Schmidt: No, I said: “If you let our farms go bust, we will make you unemployed!” This sentence has gone through all of Germany. People have written to me from all corners. I have read it 100 times tonight. Everyone answered me. I said “Yes, I did that, I said that.”

Q: I also find it remarkable that you want to get personally involved in the election campaign.

Schmidt: Yes, I’m all in. In the Bundestag I announced [my candidacy] on February 10, when the Insect Protection Act was introduced. I announced it from the stage down here.

We have now printed thousands of posters, which are already hanging out in Schleswig-Holstein. They have been going up a bit faster than the others; the printers were a bit quicker. They’re hanging on every street, on every trailer. They hang on the straw dolls. On these posters we explain what everybody needs to know. We’re now intervening in the parties’ election campaigns, because if they destroy the countryside, after all, they’re not just destroying our farms, they’re destroying the countryside and us farmers.

Now you see how nice we farmers are, and you can ask us anything, really. However, we are always considered the biggest pigs in the nation because we poison everyone. When we spread manure, they say: these pigs are spreading manure. Can you imagine that? But the plants need the manure to grow, and without it you can’t produce plants.

There is a textbook that a colleague of mine found. There’s a cow painted on it, and the cow has produced a patty. There’s an arrow pointing to the patty, and behind it says, “nitrate input.” That’s the problem—not the milk or the meat or how food is produced, but the nitrate input.

The Pandemic and Replenishing Your Faith

You have to allow every day to be a new day. In the book of Isaiah, it says that God makes all things

new. And of course, in the New Testament, it talks about the spring of living water that's in your belly. And as a country boy, I know what a spring is. We had a spring in Wilcox County, and the beauty of it was that when everything else froze, a spring won't freeze. The ice can pile up higher and higher, but it keeps coming.

I have been through some very low points during this pandemic. I have had 57 funerals. That can get so bad, to when the phone rings, you don't want to answer, because you know it's going to be a thing about somebody else is gone.

And today, I've just been trying to struggle out of the community that sent him to jail in the first place. If you send a guy back to the same place that sent him to jail, he's going back to jail. He's got the same friends, doing the same thing—nothing has happened, but he's missed three years. On top of that, they created jobs, so you could be independent: You could sell bean pies, you can sell fruit, you can sell newspapers, you could sell clothing. They had their own shops and stuff; I was very, very much impressed.

Sanctions as Population Reduction

Haiti has been sanctioned, blockaded, isolated, for almost 200 years—my God! The only reason Haiti

An article from 2009, reporting on a meeting of some American billionaires, all of whom agreed that there are too many people on Earth. "Who knows what schemes are going on to get that reduction? I do know there is a God, who has set a limit, and when the time comes, will move and save His people." —Pastor Robert Smith through the fact that India, one of the poorest places, and the poorest people, is suffering the largest number of new virus attacks now. And that's just hard to think of.

How could God be all-benevolent, and all powerful, and yet, send people to Hell? Sometimes you raise that question: If God is all loving—we're his children, and he's all powerful—so why does he let a three-year-old walk in the street, get hit by an automobile and killed, while his mother is on the porch smoking weed and drinking wine? And then they notice the child. And God could have stopped it at any time.

So, if you don't refresh every day, if you don't refresh every day, if you don't refresh every day, you cannot continue in the Christian faith or the Jewish faith.

Why Was Pastor Smith, a Christian, Supportive of The Nation of Islam?

Now, I was all but Muslim under the Honorable Elijah Muhammad, but I loved the teachings because they were the only people dealing with guys in prison. They would go to the prison, parole a guy, move him has suffered like it has, is because no man is an island, and no half of an island can stand. Everything has been done against them, to put them to where they are now.

So, to isolate and declare sanctions, against Syria, Yemen, anybody, is to starve them to death. It's to seek to destroy them.

And it may be a part of the grand scheme of things. Ted Turner said some years ago that the world population needs to be reduced to 250 million so we can have enough oxygen for everybody. And who knows what kind of schemes are going on to get that reduction, and to reduce the population of India, reduce the populations in South America, and even here, in the urban United States.

God Is on the Side of the Poor

I do know this: I do know this: There is a God, no matter what you call Him, no matter how you approach Him, whether as a Hindu, or a Muslim, or a Christian. God has a time limit set. And when that time comes, God will move and save His people, because God is always on the side of the poor.
