

EIR Special Report

The Mondale-Kissinger threat to America's national security

by Warren Hamerman

Walter Mondale's presidential candidacy is a grave national security threat not merely because he is the preferred candidate in Moscow for the Democratic Party nomination. Nor is Mondale being promoted by the international Pugwash networks, which are committed to destroying U.S. national sovereignty and instituting a world government, merely because of his violent opposition to the policy of President Reagan's "Mutually Assured Survival" speech on March 23. Nor is the danger to national survival merely posed by the fact that Mondale enjoys the full backing of both the Democratic Party's "Politburo" of Harriman, Kirkland, and Manatt and the Kissinger wing of the Republican Party—a "Benedict Arnold alliance" beyond allegiance to party, country, or Western Judeo-Christian civilization.

Each of these facts, which EIR has documented, would be ample justification to purge Mondale from the U.S. political scene.

But some time between now and the period well before either the Democrats or Republicans hold their nominating conventions next summer, the Soviet military command and Russian Orthodox Church are proceeding to challenge the United States militarily in a fullscale global showdown, out of which they hope to emerge as the triumphant "Third and Final Roman Empire." The entire Democratic Party's officially approved presidential nomination puppet show now on tour—including the "frontrunner puppet" Walter Mondale, with the supporting cast of other Petrouchkas who all savagely oppose U.S. adoption of a crash defense program including laser and energy-beam defensive weapons—is winning rave reviews in Russia. Only the "unorthodox" challenge of Lyndon H. LaRouche, Jr. for the Democratic nomination is being denounced in Moscow, for only his policies represent a potential threat to Russian "Third Rome" delusions.

The emcee of the Moscow-approved Democratic Party road show, which is presenting a "nuclear freeze soap opera" promoting the reasonableness of the Russian leadership in contrast to "warmonger" Reagan, is Moscow's man from Hollywood, Charles T. Manatt. The Democratic puppet show is meant to stir up the political conditions in the country which will make it appear politically unwise for President Reagan to make the command decision to order a full emergency war production mobilization, before we face a thermonuclear Pearl Harbor. The Democratic Party show is designed to give the national media, a fifth column for Russian propaganda, a series of barely credible pretexts to lie about the “mood” or “sentiments” of the American public. The President’s political consultants are intended to talk him into “delaying” and “moderating” his responses to the unfolding encroachments of the Russians.

Walter Mondale addressing an appreciative audience at the Sept. 29, 1982 Human Rights Campaign—a homosexual organization—dinner in New York City.

The script handed to Manatt’s marionettes is that the United States must cut, not increase the defense budget, at the same time the President must stop “provoking” and start giving ground to the Soviet bear, lest it get really angry. Presumably, they argue, America’s budget deficits will be annihilated in World War III.

‘Pre-emptive surrender’

On Nov. 29 in New York City the “front runner puppet” Mondale was handed the following lines to read at the Summit Hotel:

“We’re further away from a new arms control agreement with the Soviets than we ever were before. . . . Of course, I support the nuclear freeze, but other measures are necessary. I’m proposing that we start having annual summits between the U.S. President and the Soviet head of state. And when I get to one of those summits, I’m going to take the Soviet head of State behind closed doors and grind away for three or four days.” Later at a forum sponsored by the New Democratic Coalition, Mondale denounced the U.S. deployment of Pershing II missiles in Europe as “destabilizing,” and pledged to cancel the B-1 bomber and MX missile, to complete unilateral disarmament.

Mondale’s “preventive surrender” policy was sketched in detail in the Dec. 5 issue of Newsweek by one of his mentors, former Defense Secretary and World Bank head Robert McNamara. McNamara is the father-in-law of the notorious Robert Pastor, the top Mondale aide who was an adviser to Gen. Hudson Austin of Grenada after Austin had pulled the bloody coup that threatened the lives of the U.S. students on the island. In Newsweek, McNamara presented a “defense program” of 18 points which included: “Announce that we would not retaliate against a nuclear strike until we had ascertained the source of the attack, the size of the attack and the intentions of the attacker”; unilaterally halt development of so-called destabilizing weapons systems like the MX; no deployment of Pershing IIs to Western Europe; and “negotiate a ban on weapons in space,” a direct counter to beam defense.

This is nothing but the straightforward policy of the Trilateral Commission, set at their meeting in Italy only a few days after President Reagan made his historic March 23 speech. Trilateral Commission founding member Henry Kissinger, while in Rome at the meeting, denounced Reagan’s new policy as “Neanderthal.” Trilateral Commission members Mondale, Kirkland, Volcker, Winston Lord, Sol Linowitz, Bill Hyland, Cyrus Vance, et al. have been implementing the policy since. Mondale's campaign advisers include three high-level Kissinger operatives—William Hyland (editor of Foreign Affairs), Winston Lord (Kissinger's former aide and current President of the New York Council of Foreign Relations), and Viron P. Vaky (National Security Council Latin American expert).

The Trilateral Commission was the Jimmy Carter administration, which the American public so decisively rejected when Reagan was elected in 1980. Aside from Mondale and Carter himself, 18 Trilateral Commission members held top positions in that administration. Of the 35 names on Mondale's advisers list today, 23 were members of the Carter administration, the presidency so decisively humiliated in the last elections because it reeked of pure immorality.

The dirty boys network

Walter Mondale and Henry Kissinger are not merely U.S. national security threats because of their defense and economic policies. They are the outfront political spokesmen for a "worldwide dirty boys network." Mondale and Kissinger—along with Kissinger's business partner and NATO heir-apparent Lord Carrington—run the political protection for child pornography rings, pedophilia, drug pushing, cults, and terrorism, as we shall document in the following pages.

In this Special Report, we detail the following aspects of the supranational network which Mondale and Kissinger represent:

1) How the Hubert Humphrey Institute, named for Walter Mondale's political mentor and now the keystone in the Mondale machine, has functioned since the downfall of the Carter-Mondale regime as a center for every subversive conspiracy against the United States as a nation and the American System tradition, including collaborating with the Soviet KGB to such ends. Only those naive enough to believe that Henry Kissinger is a "Republican" partisan will be surprised to learn that Kissinger was in on the ground floor in establishing this center for bringing American high-technology industry and agriculture to an end, and the Reagan administration along with it.

2) How Walter Mondale personally, along with the Carter-Mondale administration as a whole, facilitated the development of the mass-murdering Rev. Jim Jones cult as a political asset.

3) The Mondale connection to the political networks that appease and protect—under the guise of "human rights"—the perpetrators of kidnapping and child sexual abuse rings that claim a quarter million children every year.

By raising the specter of Caligula as President of the United States, the enemies of Western civilization hope to destroy the fighting morale of the American citizenry. The hideous Sodom and Gomorrah is meant to be installed after the global showdown, as Moscow's satrapy in Washington. Read the following dossier carefully. There is no prospect worse than being a "survivor" in Moscow's Third and Final Roman Empire.

The think tank

by William Engdahl

On May 24 of this year one of the most significant political gatherings of recent history took place in Minneapolis, Minnesota, at the commercial center of world agricultural commodity trade. Under security provisions normally given only heads of state, a delegation of the highest levels of Soviet military and political intelligence operatives quietly gathered for five days of strategy planning to prevent the re-election of President Reagan in 1984.

Despite the formal protests of a number of U.S. senators, and with extraordinary security clearance from George Shultz's State Department and the FBI (whose head, Judge William Webster, publicly contradicted President Reagan's charge that the U.S. and European "peace" movement was being run out of Moscow), 25 Russian intelligence operatives converged on Minneapolis. They met with the architects of the anti-Reagan nuclear freeze movement, including George Rathjens of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT), former chief U.S. delegate to the Pugwash East-West disarmament forum, and a leading enemy of President Reagan's beam defense policy; Randall Forsberg, initiator of the Nuclear Freeze resolution, a frequent visitor to Moscow, and former staffer of the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute (SIPRI); Marcus Raskin of the radical left Institute for Policy Studies in Washington; and Barney Saunders of Cargill, since 1963 one of the world's biggest East-West grain traders.

The Russian delegation was headed by Gen. Mikhail Milshtein of GRU military intelligence, an acknowledged top expert on U.S. weapons technology. Also present was Andropov mouthpiece and top KGB operative Fyodor Burlatskii, whose recent writings in Literaturnaya Gazeta have denounced EIR founder Lyndon LaRouche, while calling the U.S. beam defense policy a casus belli. Georgi Arbatov's U.S.A. and Canada Institute was heavily represented, along with spokesmen for the patriarchate of the Russian Orthodox Church and the Russian All-Union Council of Evangelic Christian-Baptist Churches (the last seems to have been the Moscow point-man for Rev. Billy Graham's recent shocking "conversion" to Russian orthodoxy).