

Overall, according to the IADB survey, 40% of Hispanic workers in the U.S. are now earning less than they did in 2007, and another 33% are earning about the same. That means that nearly three-quarters of all Hispanics today earn the same or less than they did in 2007, while the price of food, gasoline, housing, and other essentials has skyrocketed as a result of the hyperinflationary blow-out—meaning that real wages have collapsed for 73% of these workers.

Small wonder, then, that 3 million workers can no longer send any money back home.

Heading Home to Hell

Add to this, the rise of fascist anti-immigrant hysteria—and local and state legislation—in the U.S., and you have an explosive mix. The Pew Hispanic Center reports that fully half of the 47 million Hispanics in the U.S. (including foreign-born and U.S.-born) fear deportation, either of themselves, a family member, or a friend. And the IADB says that 28% of Ibero-American-born adults surveyed are thinking of returning to their countries of origin. LaRouche Political Action Committee field organizing across the U.S. indicates that the percentages of those planning to return are probably substantially higher than that, as the crisis worsens.

But what they are heading home to, is utter hell.

A recent study by the UN Economic Commission on Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC) found that overall food prices across the region had risen by about 15% in 2007. That resulted in some 15 million people dropping below the poverty line. At the same time, 15.7 million who were already in “poverty,” were reduced to “extreme poverty”—otherwise known as indigence, or the inability to obtain sufficient food for survival.

In other words, every 1% increase in average food prices translates into an additional 1 million extremely poor, hungry people in Ibero-America.

According to Cruz López Aguilar, the head of Mexico’s largest peasant association, the National Peasant Confederation (CNC), “We’re facing a price tsunami” on the food front. Over the last few months, the price of corn in Mexico has risen by 31%, rice by 74%, and wheat by 130%, according to the May 9 daily La Jornada.

Lawfully, these figures closely reflect the Chicago Board of Trade figures for March’s speculative price increases of 80% for rice, and 140% for wheat. Mexico, nearly self-sufficient in food 20 years ago, before the policies of free trade and globalization were imposed on the country, today imports 23.6% of its corn, 50.2% of its wheat, and 75% of its rice.

Food price rises translate into starvation, as any idiot—other than perhaps a Harvard economist—ought to be able to figure out. LaRouche put it succinctly, in surveying the shock front: “This is genocide, period.”

Luege Tamargo: WWF’s Hitman Against Mexico

by Gretchen Small

The growing movement demanding that the Mexican government begin construction of the Northwest Hydraulic Plan (PLHINO) has smoked out a major security threat to the nation of Mexico and to the United States: The individuals in charge of the Mexican ministries and agencies responsible for agriculture, water, and immigration—the three areas most directly affected by the shock front now engulfing the economy—are part of a network of fascists working directly under the British Crown’s genocidal Worldwide Fund for Nature (WWF).

This nest of WWF British agents is not only acting to block the government from taking measures to defend its people; these agents are also using the desperation created by their policies to organize a mass-based fascist party.

Like the princely founders of the WWF, these agents are no recent converts to fascism. The National Synarchist Union (UNS), founded in Mexico in 1937 under the direct supervision of Adolf Hitler’s Nazi Party, has been revived from its crypt for this operation. The intent in 1937 was to turn Mexico into a beachhead for a Nazi military invasion of the United States during World War II.

At the center of today’s threat stands José Luis Luege Tamargo, the director-general of the National Water Commission (CONAGUA) and long-standing collaborator of the WWF, who has vowed to stop the PLHINO from being built.

Mexico will not long survive as a nation, should Luege Tamargo continue to control Mexico’s water resources. In an April 6 TV interview posted to CONAGUA’s website, Luege Tamargo declared that he intends to lower water consumption in all of Mexico, including by using his control over water to further collapse the cultivation of the nation’s two most staple foods, corn and beans! Mexico must concentrate on “high-value” export crops, he asserted, so as to not “waste” its scarce water on anything as minor as growing food for its people.

To impose any such policy in a time of mass hunger, is a deliberate attempt to foment chaos, revolt, and mass death.

Let Them Drink Blood?

But mass death is what the WWF has been promoting since it was founded in 1961, under the direction of the people-hating Duke of Edinburgh, Prince Philip, and his Dutch cohort, the former card-carrying member of the Nazi Party, Prince Bernhard of The Netherlands. The WWF’s unscientific drivel on saving any species but the human, is patently a fraud, but it has its purpose: reducing the world's population. So arrogant are they, that the WWF is promoting the "adoption" by humans of blood-sucking vampire bats.

The Malthusian axioms guiding this oligarchic agency are laid bare in its international projects targetting agriculture and the management and use of water. The WWF-International's Agricultural Initiative declares flat out that farming is a threat to the "environment" because "agriculture allowed and even encouraged population growth"!

Cutting off water for agriculture has thus become a major WWF project. Human beings shall be condemned to die in floods or drought, if these self-made gods of Olympus succeed in their stated intention of blocking "massive engineering schemes" to divert water from one river basin to another—as the PLHINO proposes. The WWF Global Freshwater Programme declares that its mission is to prevent new water management projects and take down many already built; block desalination (denounced as the "dams" of today); permit only those irrigation strategies which "conserve" water; and discourage water use by turning control over water to the "markets"—that is, to the oligarchs behind the WWF—so that water costs too much for human beings to use.

Financed and patronized by some of Mexico's top plutocrats (from the world's richest man, Carlos Slim and family, to the Servitje family of the Bimbo bread company and Banamex's Alfredo Harp Helú), the WWF in Mexico has set out to grab strategic control over this vital resource, using Mexico's Water Basin, Gulf of California, and Chihuahua Desert programs, in particular. (Among the three river basins targetted as priorities for the establishment of model WWF-control programs is the San Pedro-Mezquital river in Durango-Nayarit, which is the southernmost of the seven rivers to be connected through the PLHINO.)

In 2003, WWF-Mexico launched a campaign to change "the culture of water" in Mexico, to brainwash people into accepting the lie that fresh water cannot be economically created and should not be managed, and that its use has to be sharply restricted. In 2004, these lunatics succeeded in amending Mexico's National Water Law to recognize The Environment as "a user" of water, that "as such be represented in participating bodies."

Enter Luege Tamargo. Luege's known collaboration with the WWF began with his appointment as Federal Prosecutor for Environmental Protection (PROFEPA) in 2003 by President Vicente Fox. In 2005, he was promoted to Minister of Environment and Natural Resources (SEMARNAT), and in December 2006, Fox's successor, Felipe Calderón, named Luege to head CONAGUA (a ministerial post).

The WWF now had its man in place to go for the kill on Mexico.

Luege Tamargo made clear in his April 6 interview, that the National Hydric Plan he prepared is premised on the WWF's gnostic view of water as a fixed being, which must be "respected." Luege emphasized the importance of his changing the name from the usual National Hydraulic Plan to a Hydric Plan, because in his view, the word "hydraulic" embodies the mistaken concept of water usage, rather than respecting the natural water cycle (rain, evaporation, etc.), and protecting water basins. "The issue of water is 100% environmental," Luege stated.

Luege's water plan is conceived as a step towards a national "Territorial Ecological Plan," intended to radically reshape Mexico's physical economy and geography, in which the primary permitted activity would seem to be that of eco-tourism, where Mexican peasants shine the shoes of those rich enough come to watch butterflies in Mexican nature preserves.

As Luege explains, the plan would dictate where agriculture, forestry, fishing, etc. could be carried out, and even where people may live, according to the oligarchs' ecological lunacy—and profiteering. After all, one way to impose the WWF's "water culture," is to price it out of people's reach. For Luege Tamargo, water is a business, and permitting private interests to charge higher rates for water will cut consumption.

Synarchists Step Forward

Sometime in 2007, Luege's longtime political protégé and personal secretary, Congressman Rene Bolio Halloran, who worked with Luege in the National Action Party (PAN) and accompanied him from PROFEPA to CONAGUA, left his job at CONAGUA, quit the PAN, and organized a new political party. Joining Bolio as the lead organizer of the project was Enrique Pérez Luján, head of the Nazi-founded National Synarchist Union (UNS). Bolio denied widespread reports that the Servitjes and Slims—the WWF's patrons in Mexico—were financing the party; the UNS is putting up the money, he said.

The base of the new party, officially registered in January 2008 as the Solidarity Party, was drawn largely from the UNS and members of the hard right wing of the PAN party, from which Bolio and Luege come. Luege, like Agriculture Secretary Alberto Cárdenas Jiménez and National Immigration Institute head Cecilia Romero, the two officials with whom Bolio also worked most closely in the PAN party, have remained silent about the Synarchist PAN split-off.

The PAN executive was reported to have called in Luege and others to explain where they stood on Bolio's actions. Luege reportedly claimed not to be involved but this is not very credible, especially because the Nazi UNS, as you would expect, shares the same genocidal environmentalist outlook of the WWF. Sounding like a WWF tract, or a speech by Luege, the UNS program asserts that the greatest risk to humanity "comes from human activity itself," because Man has come to view himself as "Prometheus the Conqueror." This outlook must be replaced, says the UNS, by "a new Alliance with the Earth our Great Mother, Pacha Mama, Gaia."

The vampire bats, it seems, have been set loose.
