To Crush the Assault On the Presidency

by Barbara Boyd

Dec. 16—The past week saw the first widespread exposure of the corrupt use of federal agencies, particularly the FBI, in the “palace coup” aspects of the ongoing attempt to topple President Trump. As sordid as the actions of a James Comey-led cabal of FBI agents have been revealed to be, if those involved in insurrection are to be fully exposed and prosecuted, Congress must dig deeper.

If the American people are to rally to the President’s side, they need a better understanding of the motives for the attempted coup against Trump. They also must see fundamental economic progress, which, if it happens, will finally deal the ongoing coup attempt a fatal blow.

That is why LaRouche PAC has set a deadline of the President’s State of the Union address on Jan. 30, 2018, to end this coup attempt, to secure U.S. participation in China’s great One Belt One Road project, and to see Lyndon LaRouche’s Four Laws for the economic recovery of the United States introduced as a national legislative program.

In this article, we expand and update materials first set out in the EIR Special Report, “Robert Mueller is an Amoral Legal Assassin; He Will Do His Job If You Let Him.” Here we provide further evidence of the British origins of the coup, by highlighting the central role in the coup against Trump being played by the Anglo-American intelligence network. The same network also saw prominent “action” in the British-led, Obama-implemented, 2013-2014 coup d’état in Ukraine. This is not an accident. We also detail the desperate and crazed intervention of former President Barack Obama’s intelligence chiefs in a bogus lawsuit presently pending in U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C., against the Trump Campaign and Roger Stone. This intervention, aimed at intimidating a sitting U.S. District Court Judge, was and is designed to resurrect the Russiagate narrative which has been uniformly rejected by the American public. Keeping this insane narrative going is central to continuing Robert Mueller's Special Counsel investigation, which rests on highly dubious legal foundations.

The Immediate Big News

By any account, the revelations which came out this week concerning FBI Agent Peter Strzok, his mistress FBI Attorney Lisa Page, and the Ohr family—he high up in the U.S. Department of Justice, she a former CIA agent working for Fusion GPS—would be big news. On Dec. 2, the day after former National Security Advisor Michael Flynn pled guilty to lying to the FBI, both the Washington Post and the New York Times received leaks to the effect that Peter Strzok, the FBI case agent for the Russia investigation of the Trump Campaign and the Trump transition, had been removed from Robert Mueller's investigative team in July 2017, due to obvious political bias. According to the leaks, evidence of Strzok's anti-Trump bias was found by the Justice Department Inspector General in text messages exchanged between Strzok and Lisa Page, both members of Robert Mueller's prosecutorial team.

The text messages between Strzok and Page had been divulged to Robert Mueller and Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein in July. On the evening of Dec. 12, a small sampling of the texts was released to the news media by the Department of Justice. And boy, these texts are something else! On Aug. 6, 2016, Page informs Strzok that it is his duty to protect the country from that "menace," meaning Donald Trump. She links her message to a David Brooks article in the New York Times, which counsels, "if you're not in revolt you're in cahoots. When this period and your name are mentioned, decades hence, your grandkids will look away in shame." On Aug. 26, 2016, Strzok tells Page he has visited a Walmart in southern Virginia and, "I could smell the Trump support . . . it's scary down there." The most significant text released concerns an apparent meeting among Strzok, Page, and other senior FBI officials. Page writes: "I want to believe the path you threw out for consideration in Andy's office—that there's no way he gets elected but I'm afraid we can't take that risk." Strzok writes back, "It's like an insurance policy in the unlikely event you die before you're 40."

At the time of these text messages, Strzok was Comey's lead case agent on both the Clinton email case and the unprecedented Trump/Russia investigation. The latter counterintelligence investigation was opened in July 2016, based on a dirty dossier written by British MI6 agent Christopher Steele and circulated in the United States by his business partner, Fusion GPS. Both Strzok and Page worked under "Andy" or Andrew McCabe, the Deputy Director of the FBI.

McCabe had his own Clinton-bias problem: His wife Jill ran for the Virginia State Senate, and her major donors were top Hillary Clinton presidential campaign bundlers who joined the Clinton family's former chief fundraiser, Virginia Governor Terry McAuliffe, to support her campaign. McCabe participated in both the money meeting and his wife's campaign, in probable violation of the Hatch Act. It is probable that the investigation and leaking of Christopher Steele's dirty dossier against Donald Trump is the "insurance policy" being discussed in these texts.

It was Strzok who interviewed Michael Flynn at the White House in January 2017 after Andrew McCabe set Flynn up, by only telling him that the FBI needed to talk to him about some intelligence matter, and never warning him that it was a full-scale criminal interview in which Flynn was the target. Ambushed, Flynn sat down with Strzok without a lawyer. Strzok had the full National Security Agency (NSA) transcripts of Flynn's conversations with Russian Ambassador Sergey Kislyak to guide his questions. Flynn struggled to remember the details of telephone conversations which had occurred while he was on a family vacation. Flynn apparently flunked the memory test. Even James Comey did not think, however, that Flynn intentionally lied. He told the House Intelligence Committee on March 4, 2017, that Flynn had simply forgotten things. It is in the nature of our Torquemada, Robert Mueller, that the exculpatory information about the bias of the FBI agent who interviewed Flynn, and the circumstances of that interview, were kept from public view until after Mueller secured Michael Flynn’s scalp and ruined his life.

Strzok most certainly met Christopher Steele, and, in all probability, played a major role in writing the dubious and fact-free January U.S. intelligence community “assessment” that the Russians hacked the DNC and John Podesta, and otherwise meddled in the U.S. election to the benefit of Donald Trump. Strzok was considered to be the FBI’s leading expert on Russia.

As this was unfolding, the Department of Justice confirmed that Deputy Associate Attorney General Bruce Ohr had been demoted because of unauthorized contacts with Christopher Steele and Glenn Simpson of Fusion GPS. Ohr’s wife, Nellie Ohr, it turns out, was hired by Fusion GPS to gather dirt on Donald Trump. Nellie Ohr, Bruce Ohr, Lisa Page, Peter Strzok, Christopher Steele, and Glenn Simpson of Fusion GPS have all been closely associated in joint Anglo-American intelligence efforts allegedly directed at investigating organized crime, corruption, and money-laundering in the former East Bloc, an association shared with Andrew McCabe. It is an enterprise wholly penetrated and controlled by British intelligence.

Separate from this drama, Freedom Works, a Washington, D.C.-based advocacy group, announced that it had obtained an email under the Freedom of Information Act, in which Mueller’s chief prosecutorial bulldog, Andrew Weissmann, expressed his awe and admiration for Deputy Attorney General Sally Yates for telling the entire Justice Department to “stand down” and not argue for enforcement of the President’s travel order, restricting travel to the United States from certain countries. Clearly, the “resistance movement” permeates the present ranks of the Department of Justice.

China’s development drive in Africa, which will greatly expand with its Belt and Road Initiative, is creating an unprecedented optimism there. Three of China’s projects are shown here. The President’s supporters now finally smell blood in their efforts to defeat the coup attempt. Actually defeating it, however, requires an appropriate counterintelligence focus.

Lyndon LaRouche uses the principle of the transfinite to define strategic reality. What are the defining principles of the present strategic situation? What are the actual forces which are moving history as new ideas come into physical being? What are the transformative effects of those ideas? LaRouche specifies that China’s initiative, in alliance with Russia and 110 other nations, to develop Eurasia and large swaths of the presently underdeveloped world on a completely new physical-economic platform, with focused intentions to explore and develop space, has fundamentally transformed all human relationships, including all strategic relationships.

Africa, for the first time in recent history, is seeing actual physical economic development as a result—a platform of connected transportation, new cities, new manufacturing plants, and new dams and waterways.

Similar efforts are underway throughout the formerly colonial world. The elimination of poverty is posed for the first time as a realistic target with a due date. With development comes hope, optimism, and creativity.

Meanwhile, the West continues to wallow in the old decadent post-industrial paradigm where a very small percentage of the population gets rich, science and technology stagnate, and regimes with “no future” are sustained by instant gratifications, whether they be in tribal identity political wars, mind-numbing popular entertainments, pornography, or drugs. The West has absolutely nothing similar to the optimism of China’s Initiative, to offer its citizens. It can only maintain power by surveillance, mass-media brainwashing which sets the terms of popular debate, and, if it comes to it, force.

Defeating the coup attempt means situating it within this framework. If you can’t understand why the British and their friends in the Obama Administration set out to first defeat and then regime-change Donald Trump, you won’t be able to locate and prosecute the actual leaders of the insurrection. You’ll get lost in the whirlwind of details and particulars, blinding you to the larger picture. The British intervention into the U.S. election, led by Christopher Steele, MI6, and General Communications Headquarters (GCHQ), and beginning in 2015, was caused by Trump’s stubborn and righteous refusal to continue the deluded war-drive launched by the British and Barack Obama in response to China’s great One Belt One Road (OBOR) infrastructure development proposals. OBOR was viewed, falsely, as an existential threat to their continued world dominance. That war drive itself began in 2013-2014 with the Obama Administration’s coup d’état in Ukraine. It is no accident that key actors in the present coup attempt played a significant role in Ukraine, and that key themes employed there, including alleged Russian mastery of mind-bending propaganda, have also played a major role in the ongoing criminal coup attempt against Trump.

Russia! Russia! Russia!

Robert Mueller’s investigative mandate, set forth in a May 17, 2017 letter from Acting Attorney General Rod Rosenstein, specifies that Mueller is supposed to be investigating the claim that the Trump campaign “colluded” with Putin, the GRU, and the successors to the KGB to defeat Hillary Clinton. There is absolutely no legal authority, under the Special Counsel regulations, for a Special Counsel to conduct such an ill-defined counterintelligence investigation. Under the regulations, Special Counsels are only supposed to investigate specifically defined federal crimes, in situations where the Department of Justice has a conflict of interest. If the primary predicate for the FBI’s Russia investigation, the Steele dossier, is bogus, then Mueller’s already shaky legal authority to investigate is bogus. Hence the recent frantic attempt to put lipstick on a pig, resurrect Christopher Steele’s credibility, and repackage the “red menace.” One big step in this massively funded PR effort is a new book just out about Christopher Steele. Another is the bizarre intervention by Obama's intelligence chiefs, in the bogus lawsuit (Case No. 1:17-cv-1370-ESH) brought by Obama's lawyers against the Trump Campaign and Roger Stone, now pending in the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia.

The sensational, trashy allegations of the Steele dossier have been under investigation for months. No one has yet been able to prove them. Even the fake news media found them incredible when they were leaked during the campaign. Even Steele himself does not stand by their veracity, noting that they constitute raw, unverified intelligence from his former MI6 assets, often in third- and fourth-hand reports. Steele's sources are a network of compromised Russians, Ukrainians, and others who are totally dependent for their continued existence on making a good impression on MI6. We now know that Hillary Clinton and the Democratic National Committee paid for Steele's dossier on Trump and systematically leaked it to journalists to defeat then candidate Trump. Some of the journalists appear to have been paid for this service.

It also seems clear that James Comey and senior leadership at the FBI, including Strzok, McCabe, et al., dressed up allegations produced by Steele, paid for by Hillary Clinton, the DNC—and, in all probability, by MI6 and the FBI—into more consequential legalese, and peddled them to the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act (FISA) court and other surveillance authorities as part of an unprecedented counterintelligence operation against Donald Trump's presidential campaign. An FBI counterintelligence investigation is always aimed at "neutralization" of a target. It uses classified and otherwise illegal tactics. In this case, the Steele dossier was the pretext to employ these methods against a U.S. presidential candidate, an unprecedented abuse of the FBI's powers.

The public side of the campaign to redeem Steele centers on a book about him by MI6-connected "journalist" Luke Harding. Harding's book, Collusion: How Russia Helped Trump Win the White House, has been the subject of documentaries by Rachel Maddow on MSNBC and puff pieces in all the main-stream news media. It presents Steele as a recognized authority on Russia who is viewed with gravitas by every major intelligence agency in the world, despite the fact that he completely flopped in his initial appearance before a discerning American public. Despite its intention, the book provides major clues about the British coup attempt against Trump, if the reader is operating from the right strategic dimension.

According to Harding, Christopher Steele played an instrumental role in the British/Barack Obama directed 2013-2014 coup d'état in Ukraine, drafting over a hundred intelligence memos for Victoria Nuland at the State Department and Secretary of State John Kerry. Nuland was the U.S. case officer for the Ukraine coup. According to Harding, Steele used the same sources for his Ukraine memos as he used for the Trump dirty dossier.

Harding also identifies the longstanding business ties between Christopher Steele and Glenn Simpson's Fusion GPS, the United States Department of Justice, and the FBI. Fusion GPS's lucrative business relationship with Steele consists of developing trash for pay—opposition research for different oligarch clients in Russia and the former East Bloc who perpetually war with one another. It is the perfect cover for British and American intelligence penetration of the entire area. Steele's longstanding FBI contacts, according to Harding, are primarily in the Eurasian Organized Crime Strike Force, an organization long associated with FBI Deputy Director Andrew McCabe and supervised by Bruce Ohr.

The Ukraine Connection

Most of the claptrap sold to the American public about Russian propaganda and hybrid-warfare efforts originated with the coup in Ukraine. According to this fake narrative and the absurd "assessment" of the U.S. intelligence community, the Russians are super-good propagandists, with the mastermind, Vladimir Putin, fine-tuning the details daily. Putin is consistently portrayed as a cartoon-like villain from a James Bond novel in these vignettes—think Bond-supervillain Ernst Stavro Blofeld. Russian-connected television channels and publications with small audiences, such as RT and Sputnik, are claimed to punch orders of magnitude above their weight, according to this British intelligence-originated narrative, exerting a huge and demonic influence. Somehow Putin has found a magic formula to infect the American mind and spread the infection. The Russians, it is claimed, were able to use a minuscule social media effort (when compared to the 2016 presidential campaigns and PACs) to somehow make race, police violence, or similar issues, brand-new and hugely divisive concerns in the United States.

Politico Magazine on Nov. 15, 2017, recounted a telephone call between Hillary Clinton and Rick Stengel, who, as head of the State Department’s Public Diplomacy desk, was a propaganda chief in U.S. regime-change operations. The call took place on a Saturday morning in 2014, four weeks after Putin “annexed” Crimea and long after Clinton had left office. Clinton heatedly complained that the United States was losing the propaganda war to Russia over Ukraine—that the State Department was “issuing press releases” while Putin was “rewriting history.” Sharing Clinton’s view, the British and NATO set up huge military and psychological warfare operations to “neutralize” the Russian view and ensure it didn’t reach American eyes and ears. A big part of this effort was spreading the Ernst Stavro Blofeld black-hat image of Putin throughout the world. A second feature, to ensure high levels of funding for U.S. propaganda efforts, required portraying Russian news and propaganda efforts as some sort of all-powerful monster apparatus. Prominently featured, since 2014, in ensuing British-generated propaganda, is the so-called St. Petersburg Internet Research Agency. If Russian intelligence is so infinitely clever, why would they use the same photographed building for hacking and social-media bot generation over a three-year period after it had been exposed? The answer should be obvious. They didn’t.

The Ukrainian-American, Alexandra Chalupa, figures prominently in the fake DNC hacking story and the case of former Trump campaign manager, Paul ligence to dig up dirt on Manafort, collaborated with journalist Michael Isikoff in that effort, and was paid $412,000 for this and similar “work.” Isikoff was also shopped the Steele dossier by his long-time friend Glenn Simpson of Fusion GPS. Mueller indicted Manafort not for his “Russian” collusion but for his earlier activities on behalf of the loser in the U.S.-run Ukrainian coup, Viktor Yanukovich. Lisa Page, Peter Strzok’s extra-marital lover, is reported to have played a key role in the FBI investigation of one of Manafort’s business partners, Ukrainian oligarch Dmitry Firtash, during the same period.

DNC “opposition researcher” Alexandra Chalupa, it is claimed, discovered the hacking of the DNC by the Russians when she began receiving strange security warnings from Yahoo on her DNC computer while engaged in espionage against Trump and Manafort. The individual called in to diagnose the alleged hack was Dmitri Alperovitch, co-founder and chief technology officers of CrowdStrike, a violently anti-Putin Russian expat otherwise involved in the MI6/CIA end of anti-Russian propaganda operations in Ukraine. As readers of this publication know, the “hacking” of the DNC by the Russians did not occur. This has been proven by the studies of the Veteran Intelligence Professionals for Sanity (VIPS) and articulated by William Binney, a former NSA Technical Director. Alexandra Chalupa, her sister Andrea Chalupa, and her mother Irene Chalupa, a longstanding State Department propagandist, all participated heavily in the Ukraine coup itself, running an operation called “Digital Maidan,” which included sloganeering dear to the ears of the Neo-Nazi Alt Right sector which served as the coup's military wing. The Ukrainian neo-Nazis have been British and CIA assets since the end of World War II.

Those Republicans chasing the "Uranium One" phantom would be wise to actually examine the leading contributors to the Clinton Foundation since Hillary left the State Department. They are Ukraine, England, and the Saudis, in that order, with Ukrainian oligarch Victor Pinchuk playing the lead role.

As part of the Obama Administration's hybrid warfare against Russia, the Justice Department's organized and transnational crime units have played a significant role. These units and corresponding units in the FBI, such as the Eurasian Organized Crime Strike Force, are the very units now implicated in the coup operation against Trump. The DOJ's legal-assassins-with-briefcases have been deployed repeatedly, using corruption charges and associated media psywar campaigns, to take out political figures throughout the world who have earned Anglo-American disfavor.

A good start to exposing the deeper foundations of the coup attempt against Trump, then, consists of continuing to "peel the onion" on the Steele dossier and its use by Obama's FBI, Justice Department, and intelligence chiefs. Congress is being stonewalled by Robert Mueller and Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein on its questions concerning the Steele dossier, and this stonewall is presently the subject of a contempt of Congress claim being prepared by the House Intelligence Committee, against Attorney General Sessions and Rod Rosenstein. The President should consider ordering the Justice Department to declassify the materials sought by Congress, explaining to the American people why doing so is a matter of national security. A second investigative track should involve a security review of those occupying the various Eurasian and Russian desks in the State Department, Justice Department, and the rest of the intelligence community—during the Obama years and presently—starting with those actively involved in the Ukraine coup. What has their role been in the illegal leak campaign against Donald Trump?

Reds Under Every Bed

It is a feature of what news aggregator Matt Drudge calls the "Too Much Crazy" which dominates present U.S. life, that what would, in former times, be taken as slapstick comedy, now assumes funereal tones of dead seriousness. Such is the case with the Obama intelligence community's Dec. 8 intervention into the bogus lawsuit filed against the Trump Campaign and Roger Stone. It is a blatant demonstration of the political bias of Obama's intelligence chiefs, and their singular madness about Putin and Russia. Clearly, this was not limited to the FBI. The Amicus intervention and accompanying publicity is also another attempt to resurrect the flagging "Russian meddling in the election" narrative central to Robert Mueller's investigative mandate.

The lawsuit (Cockrum et al. v. Trump for President & Stone) claims that the Trump Campaign and Stone collaborated with Russians and WikiLeaks to publish (supposedly hacked) emails from the DNC, and that three individuals named in the "hacked" material suffered damage because their personal information and emails were exposed to public view. As an example of the weakness of the case, one of the named plaintiffs, who had openly claimed he was gay to friends and colleagues, claims that the WikiLeaks publication resulted in his grandmother figuring out he was gay. The lawyers bringing the lawsuit are associated with non-profit United to Protect Democracy, composed of former White House and Obama Administration lawyers. The group was formed, according to Politico, as a "worst case scenario" group to tackle Trump. It is funded by George Soros-linked groups, and proposes to conduct a civil legal war against the Trump Administration. In their statements about this case, the Obama lawyers have said that they intend to survive a motion to dismiss and gain discovery on their phony claims. Having read the record in this case, it is clear to any legally informed observer that this lawsuit could not survive the present motion to dismiss in any federal court in the United States. Changing that result appears to be the purpose of the intervention by Obama’s intelligence chiefs, who are attempting to coerce a U.S. District Court Judge into creating a plausible cause of action where there is none, based on who they are, the threat they represent, and a completely fabricated and paranoid legend concerning the strength of Russian subversion operations.

Claiming not to take a position on behalf of either party, the Amici (friends of the court) write that they have intervened in this lawsuit to offer the Court a “broad perspective on a specific question of national security that may bear on the Court’s consideration of the case—whether and how Russia uses local actors inside a country to facilitate disinformation campaigns. Active Measures campaigns encompass a range of activities that include written and spoken disinformation, the spreading of conspiracy theories, efforts to control the media, the use of forgeries, political influence campaigns, the funding of extremist and opposition groups, and cyberattacks.”

They then go on to detail a variety of claimed Russian active measures operations dating back to the Reagan Administration, while failing to tell the Court that the United States began a far better funded and resourced Active Measures campaign, directed from the White House by the CIA’s Walter Raymond Jr., against Russia at that time. Working with Roy Godson, Herbert Romerstein, and other persons associated with the paranoid and mad James Jesus Angleton—whose British-inspired Russian mole hunt devastated U.S. intelligence capabilities for a generation—Raymond’s operation aimed to destroy anyone in the way of U.S. geopolitical goals. Lyndon LaRouche was a principal target of this operation.

The Amici rant on: “Throughout, a hallmark of Russian active measures has been its reliance on intermediaries or ‘cut outs’ inside a country to facilitate active measure campaigns. Those actors include political organizers and activists, academics, journalists, web operators, shell companies, nationalists and militant groups, and prominent pro-Russia businessmen. They range from the unwitting accomplice who is manipulated to act in what he believes is his best interest, to the ideological or economic ally who broadly shares Russian interests, to the knowing agent of influence. The use of these intermediaries is designed to amplify the scope and reach of Russian influence while hiding their involvement.” So here’s the actual message of the Amicus Brief and Obama’s mad intelligence chiefs: There are reds under every bed, folks, and you just don’t appreciate it, but we do. The evidence, as always, is classified. Even if no one can prove that the Russians intervened in the U.S. election or that Stone and the Trump campaign had anything to do with WikiLeaks’ publications, a U.S. District Court should seriously entertain the idea that the campaign and Stone were Russian cutouts because we say so, and we want this bogus lawsuit to continue. The cost in legal fees alone is a great vengeance against those who refuse to war against Russia. The 14 former Obama intelligence figures signing the brief are led by John Brennan, James Clapper, William J. Burns, Michael V. Hayden, Michael McFaul, and Michael Morell. If I were the judge, I would order up an immediate psychological evaluation of each and every signator.
